

90 Killed in Virginia Flood Disaster

By United Press International
A flood-swollen settling pond in West Virginia's mountainous coal mining country crashed through a coal slag barrier Saturday, sending a three-foot wall of water roaring through a valley dotted with mining hamlets. Dozens of persons were killed.
West Virginia Gov. Arch Moore estimated the number of drownings at between 80 and 90. He said the community of Lorado in Mingo County "was completely wiped out." Another 400 or more were driven from their homes.
A state trooper said that survivors descending from the narrow mountain valleys, called hollows, "actually counted 52 bodies lying on both sides of the road" running alongside Buffalo creek.

There had been heavy rains in the area for three days, since generally steady rain began Wednesday. Flash flood and flood warnings had been posted for most of West Virginia. Another two inches of rain fell overnight and the slag barriers at the settling pond gave way.
A newsman who toured the area with National Guardsmen said, "all that is left is a post office, company store and grade school. You could see where the water splashed to the top of telephone poles."

The water carried away huge chunks of earth, burying many of the victims. Others were trapped in their homes or other buildings.
The flash flood, near Man, W.Va., near West Virginia's border with Kentucky, came at mid-morning after Buffalo Creek broke through a pile of slag. Three inches of rainfall on top of a 25-inch snowfall sent the mountain creek on its killing rampage.
An initial estimate of only nine dead multiplied after officials at the Amherst Coal Co. notified Gov. Arch Moore that the small community of Lorado, near the headwaters of Buffalo Creek, "was completely wiped out" in one of West Virginia's worst flood disasters. Mine officials said the disaster was triggered when mine water that had accumulated in a settling pond shattered its slag retaining walls and spilled through the surrounding valley.

Nine bodies were recovered in Man, five others at Buffalo Creek and the other victims perished in a cluster of communities with populations of no more than a few hundred. Moore's aides said most of the victims probably would not be identified until medical and fingerprint experts arrived at the scene today.
Makeshift morgues and emergency shelters were set up in schools throughout the Man-Logan-Williamson area Saturday night. Additional rescue workers sent to the area were delayed by landslides and high water.

Moore, whose helicopter was turned back by foul weather, intended to try again today to examine the disaster area.
"It appears now to be total destruction," said a radio newsman who toured the area with National Guardsmen after Moore declared the southwestern West Virginia counties of Logan and Mingo as disaster areas.
"All that is left is a post office, company store and grade school," said the newsman. "You could see where the water splashed to the tops of telephone poles."

Moore had to cancel a helicopter tour of the ravaged area because of rain and fog, but returned to his office at Charleston to receive fragmented reports from the isolated, rugged mountain area.
State police said Buffalo Creek, swollen by more than three inches of rainfall atop a recent 25-inch snowfall, broke through the slag pile about 9 a.m. and roared through the valley like a huge tidal wave.
The area is in the heart of West Virginia's soft coal region where miners and their families live in small, modest homes along the narrow mountain valleys, known as "hollows."

The water slashed away huge clods of earth covering the bedrock, burying many of the victims. Others were trapped in their homes, in village stores and on hamlet streets.
Police said about eight hamlets stood in the path of the oncoming water, which spilled down from the mountains into Buffalo Creek and into the already flood-swollen Guyandotte River.
Mrs. Barbara Baker said the situation was "a sheer disaster" in her hometown of Man.

President on Talks... Areas of Agreement

SHANGHAI (UPI) — President Nixon flew to China's largest city today for the last day of his visit and the release of details of the agreements he worked out with Premier Chou En-lai to begin improving Sino-American relations.
He and Mrs. Nixon made the 40-minute flight from the resort city of Hangchow in a Soviet-built Ilyushin 18 prop-jet belonging to the Chinese Civil Airline.
Their schedule included a tour of an industrial exhibit in this industrial and commercial center teeming with 10 million citizens and yet another banquet before they leave Monday for home. Flying directly over the North Pole, with a refueling stop in Anchorage, the President will arrive in Washington sometime Monday evening, taking advantage of the fact he once again crosses the International Dateline.
In advance of the release of the Nixon-Chou joint communique on their 18 hours of detailed and touchy summit talks in Peking, informed sources said it would provide for cultural exchanges, increased trade and continuing contact below the level of formal relations.

The document will be released between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. China time and 3 a.m. EST.
It was also considered likely to include a broad, general statement in which both countries pledged to work for peace and increased stability in Asia.
But it was clear that Nixon and the 73-year-old No. 2 man in the People's Republic of China had decided to sidestep some major issues as still too sensitive to resolve.
In announcing there had been an accord, Nixon told reporters in Hangchow: "You will note that I said some areas of agreement."

The President was in high spirits as he welcomed the press to his guest house in the city that Marco Polo had described as "The Venice of the Orient," although he had worked until nearly dawn Saturday on final details of the communique.

His Hangchow guest house was pale green and had a black-tile, pagoda roof. The President and Mrs. Nixon spent one night there after flying 710 miles from Peking. Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler disclosed Nixon and Chou's "basic agreement" shortly after their arrival.
Noting the need to establish Chinese trust, Nixon declined in advance to give any details of his agreement with Chou or even characterize whether he thought their communique would be encouraging.
"The communique will speak for itself," Nixon declared.
Nixon and Chou did not face each other in the early morning exchange that completed the communique, but worked through aides. They did confer for 30 minutes before boarding the Chinese plane at snow-covered Peking airport for the two-hour, 10-minute flight.

Nixon told reporters he had been up until 1 a.m. working on the communique. He was in a good mood as he talked about it.
He had invited reporters to his guest house for a group picture to mark their visit to China. The President also joined Mrs. Nixon and Chou for a scenic boat ride on West Lake, around which the city of 700,000 nestles at the foot of tall green mountains.
Nixon and Chou also strolled through flower gardens where spring was beginning to show up in tender green buds on the streets in contrast to the still snowy, cold of Peking.

The President said that he had an understanding with Chou "not to discuss the communique." And he defended, almost apologetically, it seemed, the secrecy that surrounded his talks with Chou.
"In my view, whatever we have achieved in our talks would have been seriously jeopardized and possibly may not have been achieved at all had we at any time in the course of our talks yielded to pressure" to reveal the agenda and progress at the meetings, he said.
He said the talks had to be conducted in an atmosphere of "mutual trust" and that the United States had to prove to the Chinese that it could keep a confidence.

Nixon spoke with feeling as he discussed the agreement and waved his arms in broad sweeping gestures. He was in obvious good humor despite his late hours.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Foreign Minister Chi Pung-fei were understood to have worked out the final details of the accord. Its release was delayed because it must be translated.
Informed sources said Rogers and his Chinese counterpart had worked on agreements calling for:

● Establishment of a program of cultural exchanges between the United States and China, involving students, scientists, reporters and others.

● Efforts to increase trade between the two nations. The United States, on the eve of Nixon's departure for China, relaxed embargoes that had existed since the Communist takeover of the mainland in 1949.

● Arrangements for continued diplomatic contacts at a high enough level to ensure progress on issues of mutual interest.

Waves of Planes Hit Guerrilla Positions

Israelis Cross Into Lebanon

By United Press International
Waves of Israeli warplanes pounded Arab guerrilla positions in southern Lebanon Saturday for the second day in a row, military sources said in Tel Aviv, Palestinian guerrillas said Israeli airborne troops, tanks and artillery also crossed the border again and that heavy fighting raged for hours.
The reports of the new Israeli attack came as the U.N. Security Council met in emergency session in New York on Friday's raids, which Arab and Israeli military sources agreed was one of the heaviest punitive strikes since the 1967 Middle East War.

Lebanon and the Soviet Union urged the council to consider sanctions against Israel to stop it from further attacks into Lebanese territory. Soviet Ambassador Yakov Malik even spoke of expelling Israel.

Israeli Ambassador Jacob Doron defended his country's actions, saying Israel had acted in self-defense in view of continued guerrilla activity launched from Lebanese territory.

There was no immediate official confirmation in Beirut of the Israeli attack Saturday.

Israeli Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon and Lt. Gen. David (Dado) Elazar, chief of staff, warned earlier in the week of possible military reprisals unless Lebanon curbed the guerrillas. On Wednesday, an Israeli civilian couple was killed in an Arab ambush and two security force officers and an enlisted man were killed and six others wounded in a similar incident Thursday. Four soldiers were wounded when a mine blew up under their vehicle in the Jebel Ross area Friday.

The Tel Aviv sources said the Israeli warplanes went into action after exchanges of gunfire in the Jebel Ross area in the early morning hours. They said "waves" of Israeli jet fighters pounded the guerrilla positions near Mt. Hermon but gave no details.

A guerrilla spokesman in Damascus said Israeli gunners shelled Palestinian commando positions in the south throughout the night and at dawn tried to open the road to the border township of Habbariyah.

The Israelis first sent in "armored bulldozers backed by tanks and self-propelled artillery," the guerrilla spokesman said. He said hours later, "realizing the attack was not making progress, a squadron of Mirage aircraft began bombing our positions." U.S.-made Skyhawk jets also took part, according to another guerrilla source, dropping napalm and bombs in the border areas of southern Lebanon.

Meanwhile, the U.N. Security Council met in emergency session Saturday to discuss the outbreak of violence along the Israeli-Lebanese border but adjourned after three hours of debate without taking any action or setting a date to resume.

The 15-nation Council took no action on proposals by the Soviet Union, China and Somalia to immediately enjoin Israel from further military measures against Lebanon and request complete withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanese territory.

Reports from Tel Aviv and Damascus told of Israeli air and ground strikes Saturday against Arab guerrilla positions in southern Lebanon for the second consecutive day. The council was called into session

Saturday following raids along a 60-mile front by Israeli warplanes and armored units. Of the five permanent members, only the United States remained silent.

Council President Fakhreddine Mohammed of Sudan adjourned the meeting at 2:30 p.m. EST without setting a date for continuation of debate. But he called a meeting for 3 p.m. EST Monday to resume the debate on Rhodesia.

Officials Okay Kingston Proposal

Waste Water Plans Approved

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON
Federal and state officials have approved Kingston's $2,856,878 proposed secondary waste water treatment plant. Approval was also given for additional funding by the state of $155,819 over estimates drawn up in January of 1970.

The Common Council will be asked to authorize the payment of the city's share of the project, $1,142,752, at its March 7 regular meeting.

Contract signings have been tentatively scheduled for March 15 in Mayor Francis R. Koenig's office, assuming Common Council approval of the package. The city's share will be some $54,900 more than was estimated in January, 1970.

Bids were opened on the project on Feb. 2 with Thalle Construction of Yonkers the low bidder on general construction at $2,235,000. Thomas O'Leary Electric of Kingston was low bidder on the electrical work at $128,960. Bank Brothers of Accord was low bidder on the plumbing contract at $44,745.

Final cost figures were computed on Feb. 11 by the city's consulting engineers, Brinnier and Larios of Maiden Lane. Christus Larios of Brinnier and Larios, had emphasized on Feb. 11 that city would have to begin construction on the project before March 31 or risk the loss of state and federal funds. With Council approval, the city should fall well within that deadline.

The secondary waste water treatment plant will replace the city's secondary sewage treatment plant on The Strand, the new plant was mandated by the state in 1968 which contended that the city was polluting the waters of the Rondout Creek through its secondary sewage treatment plant. In December of 1969, the city agreed that it was in fact polluting the waters of the Rondout and shortly after plans were completed for the new project.

Construction will be supervised by a project engineer and two assistants, one mechanical engineer and an electrical engineer. Completion of the project will take more than two years.

It is expected that the Towns of Ulster and Esopus, when they complete their sewage facilities, will hook up with the city sewage treatment plant, paying a fee to the city for its use.

THE LAST DROP — A towering crane dwarfs what's left of an old-time water tank along Abel Street, shortly before the structure succumbed to progress and urban renewal. Built around 1938, the 120-foot tank had a capacity of 30,000 gallons and was used to store water for the old Forst Packing Co. plant. It is now used for scrap metal. (Freeman photo by Haines)

Wine Lover's Society Formed

Marlboro's Vineyards—An Old World Flavor

By LYNN MULVANEY

Just as St. Paul advised Timothy "Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and for thine often infirmities," so did Ben Franklin tell us that "God gave us wine because he loves us and wants us to be happy."

And it would seem that Americans especially are becoming happier by the day as they take wine, wine tasting parties and the art of viticulture to their hearts.

And to help Hudson Valley residents get that real romp through the grapes spirit, a new "Societe des Vignerons" has been formed in Marlboro, once called the Rhineland of America.

Based at the Ben Marl Vineyards, the wine lover's society allows its members to purchase two vine rights, participate in the spring selection of wines from the barrels and have a case of wine bottled annually under their own personal label.

Members not only enjoy an annual harvest party and the use of the picturesque vineyard high above the banks of the Hudson River for picnicking but, they take joy in the knowledge that their particular vines are European and have not been successfully grown here for 200 years until now.

Mark Miller, the vineyard's owner and master winemaker who learned the art of viticulture while a resident of Burgundy in France, is enthusiastic concerning the success of the vines which are in their fifth year and second vintage. And, it is because of this unique success that he plans to put in even more vines of a sensitive nature.

One of the oldest grape farms in the state, Ben Marl (Ben is Gaelic for hill and Marl is a type of soil), was established as a vineyard in the 1860's by A. J. Caywood.

When Miller purchased the site 15 years ago, he found vines more than 100 years old.

Calling it "one of the most extraordinary vineyard sites he has seen, he points to its relationship to the sun with the vineyard facing southeasterly and sloping toward the river.

Lying about 300 feet above the water has an ameliorating effect on the temperature and the bowl-like contour of the land, gives it a good deal of protection from the rapid seasonal changes. Drainage is good and it is almost impossible to trap air on the site, he said. Romantic and with an admittedly idealistic interest in the grape, Miller, a former highly successful and long-time illustrator here and in Europe (Saturday Evening Post, Mc-Calls etc.) has created a European setting for the winery with a Burgundian wine cellar complete with barrels of chestnut from Spain, French barrels from Burgundy and barrel decorations from Germany.

The old world flavor of the decor is further enhanced by European sculpture and other sculpture employing the grape and winemaking motif, skillfully executed by Miller himself.

Liking to be "free of the pressures of the market place," because "once commerciality is involved, one loses his creativity and individuality," Miller, who is now producing 3,500 gallons on his 50-acre site, chose to initiate the society in order that others may enjoy viticulture and also help preserve the rural character of the valley. Some of the more than 75 members who have already joined are now planting other vineyards. Miller sees this as encouraging because he feels it is one of the last fine fruit growing areas available. Whatever wine is not absorbed by the society will be sold in selected stores who have the ability to keep it well.

The Societe des Vignerons should provide Hudson Valley wine lovers with the opportunity to know Ben Marl wines, to educate them to the fact that they are as distinctive as any produced in Europe and to bring them into contact with others who have discovered what St. Paul and Ben Franklin knew all along.

WINE TASTING—Mark Miller, an associate of the Chevaliers du Tastevin Society of Burgundian wine growers, prepares to taste of the many wines in his Ben Marl Vineyard cellar. Miller was accorded the honor of membership in the society while a resident of Burgundy, France where he savored the good life there making it possible to understand that aspect of French wine culture and adding depth to his previous "calling" to viticulture.

BOOK ON VINEYARDS—Mark Miller, who has had his illustrations published in every major publication in the western world, works a book he is writing on the development of vineyards. (Freeman photos by Kruh)

Accord Corn Grower Best Yield in State

BOONE, IOWA—Roger Anderson, Accord, in Ulster County, had the top yield in the state of New York in the National Corn Growers Association's 1971 National Non-Irrigated Corn Yield Contest with a yield of 180.37 bushels per acre on his 27 acre non-irrigated field, the association announced today.

Second place in New York went to Severn Hasbrouck Jr., Hurley, Ulster County, with a yield of 150.26 bushels per acre on 28 acres. Hasbrouck placed third in the state in the 1970 non-irrigated division. In the 1971 contest, third place in New York went to Schafer Farms, Corfu, in Genesee County, with a yield of 144.50 bushels per acre on a 25 acre non-irrigated field.

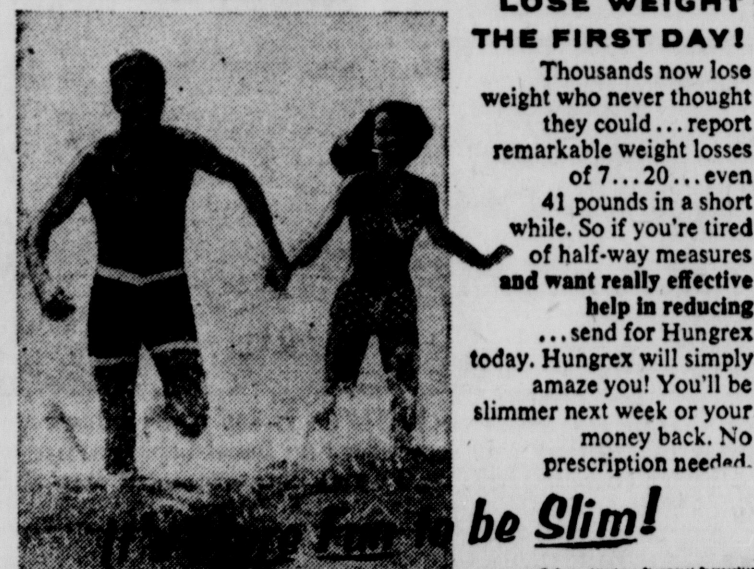

More than 500 entrants from 40 states ranging from coast to coast competed for the three first nationally in the Non-Irrigated Division with a second to each of the winners in the association's two contests, one for those farmers who irrigate and one for those who do not. The contest field had to be at least 25 acres in size. In the 1971 National Irrigated Contest, seven entries had yields over 200 bushels per acre and in the National Non-Irrigated Contest, seven entries also had over the 200 mark.

Louis Quilici of Ryde, Calif., with a yield of 243.79 bushels per acre won first nationally in the National Irrigated Contest. Savary in Des Moines, Iowa, Loyd Hall, Kenney, Ill., won April 5 and 6.

Could Revolutionize Urban Traveling

Electric Auto Designed Locally

By JON POWERS

A Kingston firm has designed and developed an electric automobile it feels will revolutionize urban transportation.

Vanguard Vehicles Inc., with offices and facilities at 482 Albany Avenue, plans to manufacture and market a full line of electric vehicles once the demand justifies full-scale production.

The president of the firm is Robert G. Beaumont, owner of the former Bob Beaumont Chrysler dealership in Kingston. He has spent two years and $50,000 designing and promoting his idea.

The product of his efforts is Vanguard I; a small, light-weight, four-wheeled electric car descended from the ordinary golf cart. Beaumont hopes it is the forerunner to a whole family of sophisticated, but inexpensive electric cars.

Vanguard I was manufactured according to Beaumont's designs and specifications in April, 1970 by Club Car Inc. of Augusta, Ga. It is licensed by New York State and has successfully passed the state's motor vehicle inspection requirements. The car has traveled more than 5,000 miles on New York streets and roads.

The car cruises at 26 miles an hour, and has a range of 40-60 miles per battery charge, depending on the terrain and temperature. Its original batteries should last for 800 charges, or 20,000 miles.

The batteries are recharged by normal household current in five to eight hours. The 800 charges needed to drive the car 20,000 miles would cost an estimated $108 compared to an estimated $466 it would cost a gas-powered vehicle to travel the same distance.

It is also estimated that maintenance costs for a gasoline powered car would be four times that of an electric vehicle.

Vanguard I weighs 1,190 pounds and is constructed primarily of aluminum and fiberglass. Its manufacturers boast that Vanguard I has no moving parts, and therefore no maintenance is required. The body cannot rust, and Beaumont claims the car's value will not depreciate markedly.

The price tag for Vanguard I reads $2,286.

Vanguard I is intended solely as a second car, and is meant to travel on roads where the speed limit is 25-35 miles an hour. Beaumont, in fact, feels the car should be banned from traveling on highways or superhighways.

"It's ideal for short trips to the store or for driving back and forth to work every day," said Beaumont. "I've been convinced that the first electric vehicles must be light-weight and low speed for urban use to reduce the tremendous congestion on our streets now."

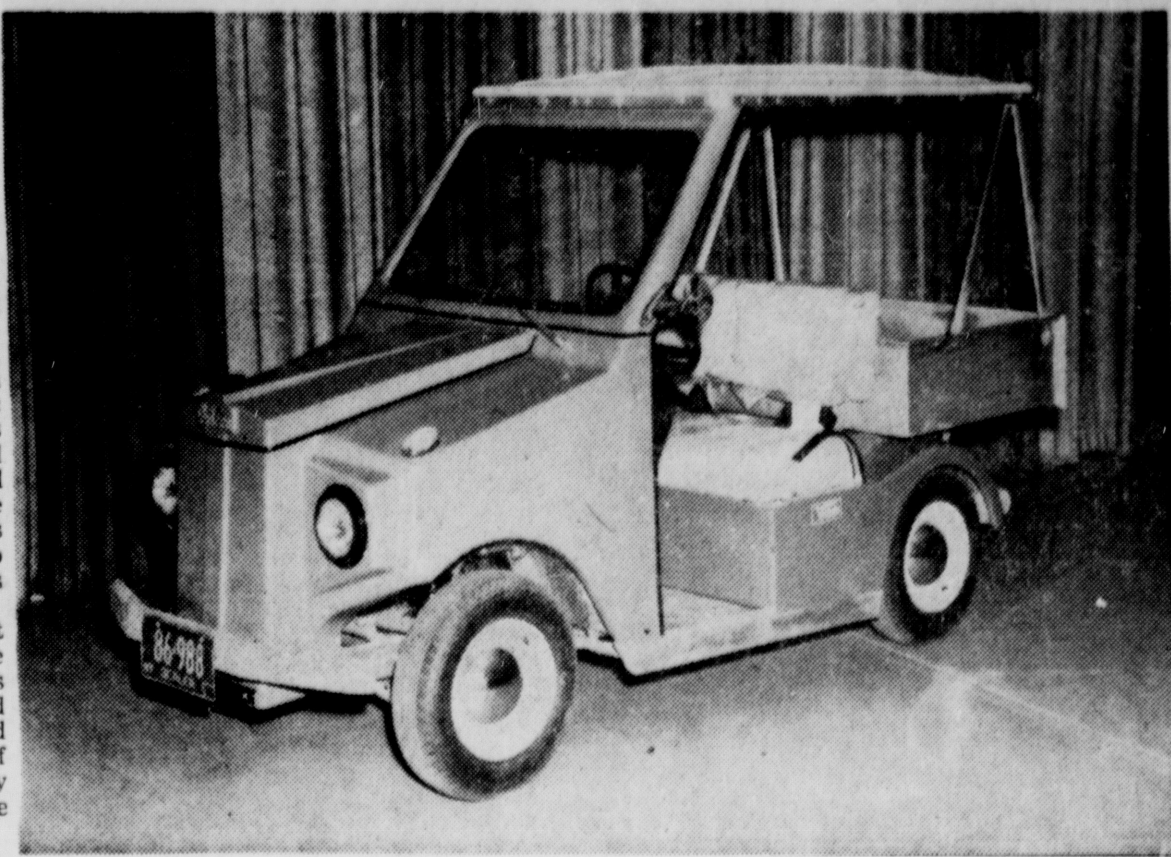

Two Vanguard I's have been manufactured for test purposes, and both are being displayed at various shows and exhibits throughout the country.

A major reason for the delay in production is a ruling by the Department of Transportation that Vanguard I does not conform to all federal safety regulations. Beaumont says he has asked the DOT to create a special classification for the Vanguard I, because it is meant only for low-speed limited travel. The case is still pending.

Once the matter is resolved, Beaumont is ready to begin production of more electric vehicles. He said he expects sales to be heavy and noted that he has already received numerous inquiries and some orders. He said he expects initial sales to be limited to college campuses, industries and government agencies.

Beaumont said he is not driven by the profit motive alone. "We have a very serious noise and pollution problem and a critical energy problem," he added. "Large scale use of electric vehicles can solve many of these problems, and we have to get started now."

VANGUARD I — AN ELECTRIC DREAM MACHINE

Kingston Vehicle in Coliseum Show

NEW YORK A group of automobiles powered by electricity will be one of the outstanding features of the 16th Annual International Automobile Show, April 1-9 at the New York Coliseum, according to Charles Snitow.

They include a prototype sports car developed by Anderson Power Products, Bedford, Mass., a utility car developed by Vanguard Vehicles Incorporated of Kingston and a small sedan developed by Electric Fuel Propulsion of Ferndale, Mich.

Two of the vehicles are for sale now — one of them is a prototype in a continuing development program. The two for sale now are the Vanguard I and the EFP car. Transit IV, the sports car, is the prototype vehicle which is a continually improving test bed demonstrating the right now feasibility of electric transportation.

Vanguard's maximum and cruising speed is 26 mph and it is only 116 inches long with a 68 inch wheelbase. It has a 40-60 mile range per charge which costs a maximum of 38 cents. It carries two passengers with room for 300 pounds of luggage.

The two-seater Transit IV is 144 inches long on a 90 inch wheelbase and can go 40 mph with a 50 mile range or 30 mph with a 60 mile range. It incorporates a unique battery tray system which allows all its batteries to be replaced in 2 1/2 minutes, thus eliminating the need for a delay for recharging.

"The International Automobile Show continues to present significant glimpses into possible futures in exhibiting these electric," Snitow declared. "The overwhelming preponderance of vehicles at the show continue to be powered by conventional engines but the electric car may well find its place in urban driving situations."

Scout Spectacular Slated March 11

KINGSTON Plans are currently being finalized for this year's annual Rip Van Winkle Council Scouting Spectacular to be held Saturday, March 11, at the New

Workshops Set By Mid-Hudson Consultation

POUGHKEEPSIE The Mid-Hudson Consultation Center in Poughkeepsie is offering two series of weekend workshops. The first entitled "Self and Other in Intimate Relationships," is for married or unmarried couples (limited to seven couples). This is geared for couples who are prepared to confront the sticky points in their relationships as each sees them and to experience alternative ways of being and communicating. Group feedback and awareness of similarities and differences are capitalized on to make clearer one's own relationships.

This workshop will be held March 4-5, and March 11-12, Saturday 1 p.m. to Sunday 5 p.m.

The other workshop, entitled "Be Your Feeling Self," is limited to 10 persons. This unprogrammed workshop will come out of the awareness of the participants at the time it is experienced. The focus, however, is personal growth by means of an atmosphere of openness, spontaneity, risk-taking and the expression of experienced feelings toward self and others. The center of experience is the reactions of each one at the present moment.

It will be held March 18-19, and 25-26, Saturday 1 p.m. to Sunday 5 p.m.

Information is available by contacting the Mid-Hudson Consultation Center, 19 South Hamilton Street, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. 12601.

ASQC Lists Two Courses

POUGHKEEPSIE Two courses in quality control will be offered to local industry by Mid-Hudson Section of the American Society for Quality Control (ASQC), with classes at Arlington Junior High School, Poughkeepsie, starting March 6. Robert W. Reip, education chairman of the section, has announced.

Basic Statistical Quality Control, a seven-session course, will meet in Room 114. The course emphasizes control chart techniques. Acceptance Sampling, a ten-session course, will meet in Room 116. The course covers theory and use of sampling plans. Both courses will be conducted Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m. Arlington Junior High School is at 5 Dutchess Turnpike, Poughkeepsie.

These courses are designed to be of most use to quality control inspectors, technicians, and engineers in industry. A high school mathematics background is a sufficient prerequisite for the courses. Prospective students should contact Reip at Hercules, Inc. in Port Ewen for registration information.

ASQC is a national professional society of 19,000 members, embracing quality practitioners in industry, education, and government. The Mid-Hudson section has sponsored educational programs for a number of years at Arlington and Kingston High Schools, Ulster County Community College, and Vassar College.

The first entitled "Self and Other in Intimate Relationships," is for married or unmarried couples (limited to seven couples). President's Popularity Rating Highest in Four Months Field Enterprises, Inc.

PRINCETON, N.J. President Nixon's popularity rating is currently at the highest point recorded in four months, with 52 per cent of Americans expressing approval of the President's performance in office.

The current figure is four points higher than his previous score of 49 per cent approval, recorded in early January. The most recent survey was conducted February 4-7, shortly after President Nixon announced to the nation his eight-point Vietnam peace plan.

A total of 1450 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed in person to obtain the results of the latest survey, which was conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period February 4-7. This question was asked:

Do you approve or disapprove of the way Nixon is handling his job as President?

Here are the latest results, compared with those from the January survey:

Approve Nixon Handling of Job?		Jan.	Latest
Approve	52	49	52
Disapprove	48	51	48
No opinion	12	11	12

Attitudes on two key issues—the state of the economy and the Vietnam war—are reflected in the approval and disapproval ratings given the President.

Regarding the state of the economy: Only about one person in eight would like to see price-wage controls taken off completely. At the same time, however, a majority of Americans are dissatisfied with the way price-wage controls are currently functioning. At the core of much of this dissatisfaction is the complaint that wages remain the same while food prices go up and taxes remain a continuing burden.

Regarding the Vietnam war: A majority of Americans in the current survey, 52 per cent, who expressed disapproval and 15 per cent who did not express an opinion.

Declining public confidence in President Johnson's Vietnam policies was one of the key factors in his decision not to seek the re-election that year. Those who express approval of the way President Nixon is handling the Vietnam situation most frequently offer these reasons:

Reason for Approval: He's doing the best he can under the circumstances 18%

Troops are being withdrawn (with specific mention of withdrawal with honor) 4
Our involvement is being ended 4
Other favorable comments 15

*Total exceeds 52 per cent (the percentage who approve) because of multiple responses. Here are the chief reasons given by those who disapprove of the way President Nixon is handling the situation:

Reason for Disapproval: Promises not kept—Nixon is not doing what he said he would—escalating rather than de-escalating the war 12%
U.S. should have been out of the war long ago 9
Troops should be withdrawn at a faster rate 8
Nixon's motives are political—he's just trying to get re-elected 5
Other unfavorable responses 9

Jack Anderson Says

Consumer Bills Face Tough Sledding

WASHINGTON — Sailing under the colors of consumer advocates, White House and big business lobbyists are working hand-in-hand to scuttle the most important consumer bills now pending on Capitol Hill.

One measure is no-fault auto insurance which would cut car insurance costs by a billion dollars annually. The other bill would set up an independent Consumer Safety Agency to keep hazardous products off the market.

Both bills are being debated in secret sessions of the Senate Commerce Committee, where a behind-the-scenes confrontation has developed between pro-consumer senators and friends of the special interests.

The senators fighting to get the bills have been helped by top officials of several government agencies who have fired off letters opposing the legislation to Senate Commerce Chairman Warren Magnuson, D-Wash.

These letters have also been leaked to selected senators for use as ammunition in their efforts to weaken the legislation.

One such letter from the Commerce Department, marked "Official Copy Please

Do Not Remove From File," makes a few well-chosen platitudes about consumerism, then insists the bills should be weakened because "it is necessary to ensure business the protection of (its) secrets."

Even Elliott Richardson, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), has lined up against the safety agency because, as his letter says, it might lead to lawsuits against "responsible officials and industry."

Flanigan Finagling
From the White House, associate budget director Frank Carlucci wrote Magnuson that he "strongly opposes" the bills. But these letters are only part of the administration's pressures in Congress.

Presidential aide Peter

Flanigan, perhaps big business's best friend in the White House, has been making the same rounds—and the same pitch—as the industry lobbyists.

The lobbyists themselves have been out in unheard of numbers. We have come across bottle lobbyists who want the consumer agency bill softened because it will outlaw dangerously thin bottles.

Appliance makers have had their spokesmen on the prowl complaining that the proposed regulation of ovens and other potentially hazardous household equipment would be unfair.

They have been joined by food industry lobbyists who don't want to see the new consumer agency replace the old Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which has always stuck up for the industry, not the public.

Trial lawyers, fighting the loss of a billion (B) dollars in legal fees, have made the halls of congress a court-house.

Not surprisingly, every one of the lobbyists has contended that weakening the bills would actually help, not hurt, the consumer.

The tiny band of Administration officials who favor the consumer bills have been effectively silenced. Transportation Secretary John Volpe, for example, is privately convinced from more than 20 volumes of data that a tough no-fault bill is a necessity. But he has glumly sat out the battle.

While the lobbyists hovered in the corridors, the Senate Commerce Committee held its first secret session Wednesday. The bill survived this test intact, mainly because Sens. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., and Howard Baker, R-Tenn., both frequent supporters of the special interests, decided to skip the meeting.

The scenario now calls for Chairman Magnuson and Consumer ally Frank Moss, D-Utah, to push through the safety agency measure, and mild-mannered Phil Hart, D-Mich., to lead the battle for no-fault. House backers meanwhile, have suspended action pending the Senate outcome.

Figure's Finances
Costa Rica's President Jose Figueres, one of the democratic heroes of Latin America, is a great political leader but a poor businessman. His personal finances, apparently, are in a shambles.

The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), which keeps tabs on all world leaders, friends and foes alike, has learned about Figueres' finances from a source close to his nephew.

States the secret CIA report: "According to Fernando Figueres Zamora, the nephew of President Jose Figueres Ferrer, all of the President's business enterprises are doing poorly. Fernando Figueres, who manages some of the President's businesses, said that he personally has asked to be allowed to resign because of these financial difficulties."

"He commented that all the family are deeply concerned with family financial matters and the fact that the President does not seem to be able to administer his business enterprises profitably and considers that the President is too dependent on some of his close advisors."

"(Another source) indicated that Figueres seemed obsessed with his financial problems."

Brazilian Coup
A secret intelligence report claims that five Brazilian air force officers were held under house arrest during President Mello Medici's recent visit to the United States.

The officers were detained to forestall a possible coup against the Brazilian strongman. The secret report claims that a clique of air force generals was attempting to gain support from Ultra-conservatives to overthrow Medici. The report adds that the generals have little prospect of success.

The First Giant Step

It is particularly appropriate that out of the wealth and wisdom of ancient Chinese lore should come the proverb that epitomizes the historic event unfolding far across the seas.

A journey of 1,000 miles must begin with a single step, said the Chinese.

President Nixon's journey to Peking is 10 times the 1,000 miles but the first significant step has been taken, a bold maneuver not ordinarily associated with the conservative Republican cloak of the man in the White House.

Regardless of political convictions, it was a thrilling sight to watch the "Spirit of '76" roll effortlessly to a halt at the airport outside Peking, to see the American flag flying in the breeze on strange and foreign soil and to hear the stilted yet proper playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Chinese musicians of the People's Liberation Army.

It was exciting only because of its import, its potential. Actually the scene was one of calm and serenity and, observing the scene unfolding on the TV screen, one wondered why couldn't it ever be thus.

But now that the first step has been taken, bring to fruition the dramatic announcement Mr. Nixon made last July, the nation and the world must wait expectantly for the behind-the-scenes meetings to also bear fruit.

The negotiations between President

Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai well could be the most important in recent American history. There are so many problems that beg solution, problems that go beyond the immediate concern for a cessation of hostilities in Indochina.

There's the problem of Taiwan, for example, and even Korea. There's a question of both America and China not offending Russia. There's the economic issue involving expanded trade with China.

Even before the meetings began, China had made gains, headed off course by its triumphant entry into the United Nations with the simultaneous expulsion of Taiwan. Additionally, the United States has dropped a number of barriers to travel and commerce.

But even if no pacts of vast significance are made, President Nixon's visit already is a success. There's a new feeling, new hope. An entire generation has been born and reached maturity since the last time there was rapport between the countries.

It will not be easy to bridge the gap dividing China and the United States. The ideologies and philosophies are so markedly different. But Americans once again are looking with eagerness and interest across the seas at the nation which until recently was first the Yellow Peril, then the Red Menace.

The first giant step has been taken.

Democrats Reject Strategy

The 24 Democratic governors at the recent Annapolis caucus apparently would rather win the party's Congressional, legislative and local offices than the Presidency. That is a reasonable interpretation of their rejection of the advice of a professional political strategist, who promised them victory no matter who is the party's Presidential candidate, if they would follow his strategy.

The strategist is Joseph Napolitan, who organized the winning campaigns in which Milton J. Shapp and Marvin Mandel were elected governors of Pennsylvania and Maryland respectively. He is also close to Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien of the Democratic National Committee, though he said he was speaking for himself and not the committee.

In brief, Napolitan urged Democrats to concentrate their meager financial resources in 20 key states with 318 electoral votes, more than enough to elect a President—"and forget the rest." He singled out the 13 states that Hubert Humphrey carried in 1968 plus "four that we nearly won" or should have won—Missouri, Delaware, Alaska and New Jersey—plus three "battleground states"—California, Illinois and Ohio.

The 13 that Humphrey carried for the Democrats included Connecticut, Hawaii, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Washington and West Virginia, plus the District of Columbia.

The governors whose states were left out were aghast. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri said he "could not agree less." Richard F. Kneip of South Dakota said he "would have nothing to do with this stupid idea." Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin called it "this crass and cynical proposal." Jimmy Carter of Georgia, noting that it would write off the old South, said the adoption of the program would make him "withdraw from the Democratic party." Shapp objected it would "cost the party congressional, legislative and other important offices."

The upshot was the unanimous adoption of a resolution for "a national strategy to capture the hearts, minds and votes of every state." They may have rejected a sure thing for provincial advantage.

Showing Good Will

WASHINGTON — President Nixon has many things to talk about with Premier Chou En-Lai, but the world will never get a detailed account of their conferences. The reports and communiques will probably cover only the merest generalities, which will reflect steps toward friendship if it is a successful mission.

For what the President is trying to achieve is an "understanding." This means a recognition of the problems of the government of mainland China—the threats that confront it in the steady build-up of friction with the Soviet Union which could lead to war. Apparently the biggest fear Peking has is that some day it will find itself not only faced by Soviet divisions across its borders but more and more encircled by countries under Moscow's influence—a group of the enemy's allies.

The future of Taiwan is important, but it is by no means as pressing now as the changes going on in Asia which could compel Peking to spend more of its funds on armament and particularly on nuclear weapons.

Mr. Nixon emerges in a sense as a mediator. A detente between the 775 million people of mainland China and the American people would be of great help to the Peking regime. In fact, there is every reason why Premier Chou En-Lai should find a way to settle some of the questions that have brought disputes with the United States so as to pave the way for the attainment of the really far-reaching objective — restoring the friendly relations that used to exist between America and China.

As he left Washington, the President made it clear that he does not expect to deal with particular issues so much as he wants to provide evidences of friendship which would tell the world the governments of the United States and China are going to work together. In a brief speech to members of his cabinet and of Congress, he said:

"As we look to the future, we must recognize that the governments of the United People's Republic of China and the government of the United States have had great differences. We will have differences in the future. But what we must do is to find a way to see that we can have differences without being enemies in war. If we can make progress toward that goal on this trip, the world will be a much safer world and the chance particularly for all of those young children over there to grow up in a world of peace will be infinitely greater."

The President, in another place in his remarks, declared that he is under no illusions that 20 years of hostility between the Peking regime and the United States government "are going to be swept away by one week of talks." What he is undoubtedly seeking is a mutual willingness to cooperate amicably in dealing with the many problems that have arisen in Asia, some of which threaten larger wars.

Basically, Mr. Nixon does not go merely as a negotiator to take up specific subjects but as the representative of a country which wishes to show its good will to another nation and get the assurance that in the future the two governments will proceed with mutual trust and faith to try to maintain peace in Asia and thus help to preserve peace in the world.

Naturally economic questions will come up in the discussions, and there will be conversations about trade opportunities that China may obtain which have not been available before. This is of tremendous importance to Peking. Developing ways for a country to become more productive and earn more money to improve the living standards of its people is one of the biggest political factors in the life of any government. The United States can be of assistance in such matters and has already opened some trade doors which have been closed in recent years.

If, as a consequence of the President's trip, trade relationships with Communist China become helpful to economic development there, this could have an effect on the attitudes of other nations, too. It could produce a more favorable feeling generally toward Peking.

On the whole, Mr. Nixon is anxious to prove to the government, of mainland China that the United States wants to be a friend and that, while there are differences between us, these can be worked out gradually. In the meantime, the President desires that the Peking regime shall be known as a cooperative government and perhaps an ally of the United States in Asia.

Ray Cromley Says

Creating a Six-Bloc World

WASHINGTON (NEA)—It can be said with some certainty that President Nixon attempts, with the Peking trip, to destroy the "two-power" world in which we have lived this past decade.

In its place, he will create if he can a world of six major independent competing blocs, each one bringing pressure on the others.

Mr. Nixon has been convinced by Henry Kissinger that a two-power world is inherently unstable. Every issue between the two superpowers comes to involve life and death. Any relative weakening of one side is tantamount to an absolute strengthening of the other.

Effective negotiation becomes almost impossible.

Small nations play off the two powers against each other, knowing that neither can afford a military showdown. A horde of tiny countries are thus free for military adventuring and other mischief which can, in the end, lead to Soviet-U.S. confrontations.

Mr. Nixon and Kissinger believe that six-power blocs, by providing a sort of diffused balance of power, though they would not guarantee peace, hopefully will make possible a tolerable armistice that could last perhaps for a generation or more.

Kissinger derived this concept from longtime studies of Metternich, the adroit 19th-century Austrian diplomat he unabashedly admires.

Neither Mr. Nixon nor Kissinger has any illusion that peace is possible with revolutionary countries with inflexible objectives. But a balance may be.

The new six-bloc world then would include a West European power bloc, the People's Republic of China, a strengthened Japan and hopefully an independent India. (An economically strong and independent Arab bloc to Russia's south would be desirable in theory. But the Arab-Israeli strife, the difficulties inherent in uniting the Arabs and the almost-impossible economic problems make this an impracticality.)

This bloc concept is one major reason Mr. Nixon and Kissinger have used this country's diplomatic powers to work for a stronger West European union by pushing for the admission of Great Britain.

This is why Mr. Nixon would go to some lengths to strengthen Communist China's position, even at some political risk at home and to our relations with Japan.

For the same reason, Mr. Nixon would like to shake Tokyo out of its inward-looking stance and convince the Japanese they must take a much more vigorous role in Pacific and world affairs.

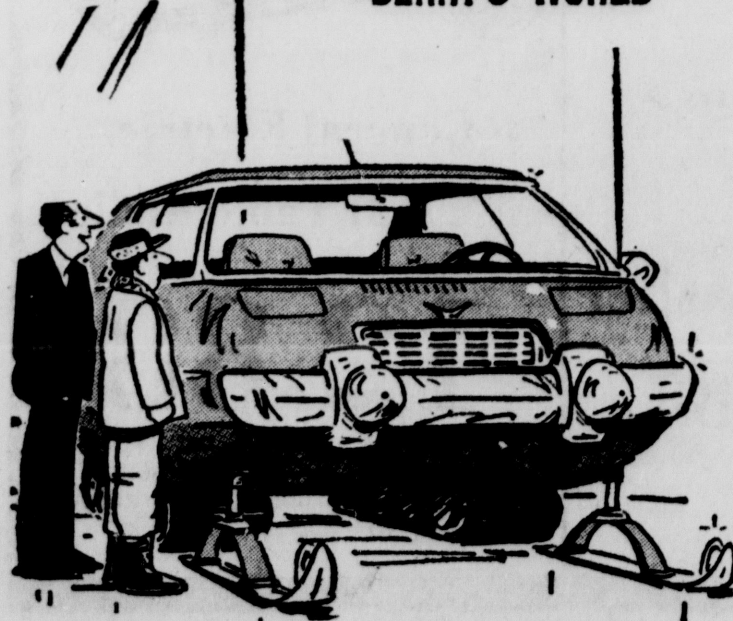

Kissinger firmly believes, and he has convinced Mr. Nixon, that this multipower world, if it can be created, would add to the security of the United States.

Certainly it would mean Washington would not of necessity be at the center of every quarrel with Russia.

Kissinger is also convinced the United States does worst in world affairs in two-nation dialogues, and that we are at our best when we operate as part of a group in which there is a great deal of give and take.

The six-bloc world would thus take from U.S. shoulders a considerable amount of the day-to-day burden of standing up to Russian aggression.

POLITICIANS

Enclave Theory—Divorce, Political Style

THE ENCLAVE THEORY—Local politicians, we've found, tend to be limited in their vision. Not blind, of course, just limited to specific boundaries, like their terms in office. And their Election Districts.

Aaron Klein, former county chairman, as a practicing politician, tended toward the normal limitations, but he also had the ability to engage in abstract political theory.

One of Klein's favorite topics of discussion, three or four years ago, was his "enclave theory." General James Gavin had enunciated the same theory in Vietnam, whereby the United States would establish strongholds in the cities and then spread control to the countryside.

That, too, was Klein's Democratic enclave theory. Establish the city of Kingston as the stronghold and then spread to the surrounding towns. He was only half successful. Kingston is now a Democratic stronghold.

City Beat

By HUGH REYNOLDS
Freeman City Hall Reporter

James T. McCordle, Klein's successor as county Democratic chairman, seems to be working Klein's enclave theory in reverse. That is, establish strongholds in the county and then take over the city.

This week, the lingering feud between McCordle and the city boiled to the surface with the news that McCordle had refused to accept Bob Gallo, Kay Quick and Florence Klein as members of his County Executive Committee. Gallo is the city's alderman-at-large, Mayor Koenig's "right arm." Kay Quick is Don Quick's wife. Don Quick is a power in the Common Council. And Florence Klein is Aaron's wife. Which in itself would be reason enough for her removal by McCordle. You don't invite Klein and McCordle to the same party.

The city committee reacted swiftly to McCordle's dumping of "the big three" and voted to separate from the county executive committee until McCordle saw the light.

The divorce was expected between those two strange bedfellows. Neither had much to gain from living together.

The city doesn't need the county. The city does just fine by itself, thank you. Since and including the 1967 elections, the Democrats have out-elected the Republicans in the aldermanic runoffs by a 38-14 count. The mayoral elections have been laughers.

The county needs the city to help elect its county-wide candidates (state senate, assembly and congress), but those county-wide candidates have found the city to be a minefield of political intrigue. A county candidate coming into Kingston may pick up the support of one faction, but in all likelihood he also picks up the determined animosity of several others, opposed to the first faction.

Put in simple terms, the attitude in the county is this: "The only thing the city is interested in is electing city officials."

McCordle, of course, knows all that. He also knows that for the past 50 years or so, the Democratic game plan for victory on a county-wide basis was to carry the city big to offset the huge Republican majority in the county.

That theory has not worked and McCordle knows it cannot work with McCordle as county chairman. He is extremely unpopular in the city, for a variety of reasons, dating back at least a dozen years.

His only way out is Klein's enclave theory in reverse: Take the fight to the Republicans... out in the county.

It may be that the city committee played into McCordle's hands by divorcing itself from the county committee.

Deer Slaughter

Editor, The Freeman:

It was bitterly cold standing beneath the tall Pines listening to the wind whistle through the naked trees. Snow crusted with ice made walking hazardous. There were moments when one could hear the barking of dogs in the distance. It was not long before they came into view relentlessly following their prey. Ever since the first snow had fallen the senseless killings had been going on and no one seemed to care. The hunt would soon be over as the dogs were gaining fast on the hapless creature, struggling frantically to out distance its pursuers. No one could mistake the fear that gripped the timid and defenseless animal as its hoofs sank deep in the snow with each agonizing effort to escape. In a flash the killers were upon it slashing and tearing large pieces of hide exposing raw flesh on the quivering body as death slowly silenced the pain. The wretched slaughter of deer and other wildlife by dog depredation goes on year after year and those that could stop it show no compassion to do so.

The Gog is a loveable creature, more dedicated to its master than the owner is to the pooch. Since it is their nature to kill when roaming the countryside, the law stipulates they must be tied up during the crucial winter months. When they are not under control the horrible havoc becomes a yearly occurrence. Last winter the news media reported 15 deer were slaughtered in the New Paltz area, and the situation was equally as tragic in other localities. Predators kill for food, dogs for pleasure. Responsibility for their conduct should be placed where it belongs on the owner. There are more dogs in some areas (many untagged) than people, which would indicate dog lovers are harboring more animals than they have reported to the census taker. The problem is not helped any when so called dog lovers take unwanted pets miles away from home then dump them out of their car for someone else to care for. Gun Clubs were originally organized for the protection of wildlife. Are they still motivated by the same objectives. Why then have they not pressured law enforcement agencies and state conservation officers to enforce the dog laws. Hunting legally in season is humane compared to the ruthless dog depredation that goes on every year. As communities population increase so will dogs. It is only a question of time when Gun Clubs will become social clubs as many are now. The tragic killings could be prevented if our citizenry had the interest and desire to stop it.

Permissiveness is a cancer in our society. No longer is there respect for the laws of GOD or man.

Editor: The Freeman:
In response to a news Release by Alderman Sinsabaugh and broadcast over a local radio station, Saturday, February 19th, I issue the following statement for the record:

Many people of the City of Kingston were led to believe that the Public Works Department lacked total direction by reason of my absence at the commencement of the recent snowstorm. The inference that I had intentionally left the city after receipt of a detailed storm warning is misleading and contrary to fact. Here are the facts:

My decision to leave Kingston late Friday afternoon, February 18th was prompted only after consultation with our official meteorologist at approximately 2:30 p. m. that day. Positive storm warning details were unavailable at that time, but same could be expected to be transmitted later that evening.

Emergency procedures were outlined to my two appointed deputies in charge. Mr. Kellerman and Mr. Cragan, whom I consider to be highly qualified in snow fighting techniques and certainly capable of directing men and equipment to their best utilization as field conditions warrant. Dispatchers were issued instructions in call out procedures and emergency assignments posted.

I was in telephone contact with Foreman Kellerman at 5:45 p. m. and additional instructions were issued to him should he be in receipt of certain storm details.

The duty dispatcher was called at approximately 9:15 that evening and he relayed storm data received by him at 6:30 p. m. Both the dispatcher and Foreman Kellerman were then informed I would remain overnight and would commence my return journey at daybreak. Unfortunately, I too became the victim of a snowdrift, however, I did contact my dispatcher, supervisors, and the mayor himself after reaching a telephone.

My reasons for leaving town on my own time are privy to myself and my family only, and Mr. Sinsabaugh's public statement is interpreted to be an infringement of individual rights. CITY OF KINGSTON DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS CHARLES J. COLE SUPERINTENDENT

Dear Mr. Bell,
Albany, New York

The membership of the Ontario Teachers Association must express its apprehension regarding the proposed House bill, prohibiting civil servants and employees of public school districts from taking any part in political activities. We feel that it is a clear violation of the individual's civil rights. Those affected by this proposed bill, surely bear a great public responsibility throughout every working day. It is inconsistent to deny the same group of public employees, the responsible freedom of political action. We most emphatically urge you to reconsider, and recall this bill which threatens the most basic of all civil rights.

'Chauvanist Pig' Reports

MARRAKESH, MORROCCO

The following letter was left for me by a friend, Art Midgley, who visited Morocco just before I arrived. Art — a genuinely unrepentant, self-proclaimed, card-carrying male chauvinist pig — obviously had a ball:

"Dear Bob,
"Sorry we couldn't overlap, but I had to get back for an emergency session of the Bull Moose Party, which, as you know, is launching a big drive to repeal the nefarious 19th Amendment that gave women the vote."

"This country is like Eden before Eve. Everybody seems happy, and I can see why. Men are men and women are still women."

"You can imagine how my heart leapt when I beheld my first veil. Consider how excellent veils would look on those revolting women back home. Here the women don't even think about revolting."

"(I know you don't agree with me about the woman's role — I guess I was born a male Chauvinist piglet — but it's my hope that your eyes will be opened by this paradise on earth.)

"Actually, some young women are being tempted into evil thoughts by books, movies, and too much education. It's a cloud no larger than a woman's hand on the desert horizon, but we all know how fast subversion can undermine sanity. Think: My grandfather used to eat before the rest of the family; now he would be polishing the silver, probably."

"You can see the promise of the past and the threat of the future in one incident:

"When I first arrived I asked Tems, the chief barman at the Mamounia Hotel, whether women could vote. He didn't know, although he's intelligent and speaks several languages. He asked several other men who work here. They didn't know either. Finally he learned from a female telephone operator that woman were enfranchised three years ago.

"(A man I talked to in Rabat, the capital, said that it didn't matter whether women voted because it didn't matter whether men voted, either. Elections are so limited that King Hassan II, his relatives, friends, and the big landowners all stay in power, no matter what.)

"Most Moroccan husbands would make Hugh Hefner look like the Women's Lib Playmate of the Year. Some go too far, even for me. For example, I feel a little uneasy when I see a woman with a headload of goatskins walking toward the local market, preceded by her husband riding a donkey."

"I was also somewhat shocked when Tems told me that the 300 male employees of the hotel were recently questioned about their families (they needed the information for an insurance plan) and nearly 50 men didn't even know all their children's names."

"As you know, the Islamic religion permits a man to have as many as four wives.

Marriages are arranged by parents and sealed by signed contracts. Like the Bible, there are many interpretations of the Koran. One says that a woman can by no means contract herself, whether with or without the consent of her guardians."

"Why? Because, 'women, being of weak reason and open to flattery and deceit' might foul it up. (Interestingly, that's the same explanation we in the Bull Moose Party give for wanting to abolish women's suffrage.)

"Anyone who is foolish enough to take on more than one wife has to agree to treat them equally. In other words, if he makes love to Zebda more than to Naga, or doesn't give one as many clothes or doodads, a part of him will be paralyzed on judgement day. The part will depend on how many wives he had."

"To get rid of a wife, the man has only to say, 'I divorce you.' To be 'final,' this short formality must be repeated three times. (I put 'final' in quotes because there is a period of time during which the husband can reverse himself.)

"Tems says that if a man divorces the same woman three times, she has to be married to someone else for at least one night before he can marry her a fourth time. I say that anyone marries a woman four times deserves to be paralyzed all over on Judgement Day."

"In some mosques women are banned; in others they have to use a separate entrance and sit in a special area on the side where they can hear the men praying but can't see them."

"My guide in Fes said that this reasonable arrangement in the churches came about because the Koran adjures Muslims to devote their spirits entirely to Allah. While worshipping, there must be no diversions. Women, he said, are widely known to be the biggest diversion there is. So men wisely keep them out of sight and out of mind while praying."

"The Islamic religion makes it clear that women are only for kitchen, bed, and children, in that order. Again, I wouldn't go that far myself; I think they ought to be encouraged to work in cottage industries, dress shops, on the society pages of newspapers, and things like that—as long as it doesn't interfere with their housework."

Cheers,
ART

Chief Glassman Explains Law Regarding Snowmobiles

KINGSTON

During the recent snowstorm, many complaints of snowmobiles being operated on city streets were received by the Police Department, according to Chief Julius Glassman, who explained that all the operators were in violation as they did not receive the proper authorization for use of the vehicles. Chief Glassman noted that snowmobiles are not classified as motor vehicles and they are governed by the Conservation Law (Section 125 V. & T; Section 8-0303, subdivision 6 of the Conservation Law.

"To be lawfully operated anywhere in the State of New York, the chief said, "snowmobiles must be registered and bear a number issued by the Office of Parks and Recreation, but it is unlawful for any person to drive or operate any snowmobile on a public street or highway with certain exceptions, which are few."

It was learned that in dire emergencies, permission may be obtained to use a snowmobile on a public road after necessary arrangements are made.

Snowmobile owners should acquaint themselves with the law or inquire of police agencies regarding various uses of the machines.

"Owners of snowmobiles," Glassman said, "and operators of snowmobiles should familiarize themselves with the section of the Conservation Law that pertains to operators, operation, offenses, accident reports insurance, enforcement and penalties to avoid any embarrassment on their part. The Kingston Police Department stands ready to assist snowmobile owners and operators in any way it can."

Dutchess Man Is Killed In Icy Highway Mishap

KINGSTON — About four inches of wet snow fell on the area Saturday, along with a freezing drizzle, forcing the cancellation of a number of area activities and contributing to the death of a Dutchess County man.

The skies were expected to clear Saturday night, with a clear, cold forecast for today. The high temperature is expected to be in the 20's, today but the winds are expected to be light.

Killed Saturday in Dutchess County was a man tentatively identified as George Olivette, 70, of Cambridge. He was killed by a car while walking on snow-covered Route 22 in the Town of Dover at 5:45 a.m. Saturday, according to the Dover Plains State Police.

According to State Police, it was snowing, the road was slippery, and visibility was poor at the time of the accident. The man tentatively identified as Olivette was walking south on Route 22 when he was struck by a pickup truck operated by John Percy Smalley, of Dover Plains.

State Police said Smalley reported seeing the pedestrian, and applying his brakes and skidding before striking him. The man was pronounced dead at the scene. No summons was issued.

In Kingston Saturday night, Superintendent of Public Works Charles Cole reported conditions in the city to be "normal following a snow storm of this type."

Cole said all main routes in the city were passable, clear, and in most cases down to bare pavement. Some areas had a slush condition, said Cole, which could be hazardous if caution was not exercised.

The superintendent reported the city's side streets to be all open and passable.

However, this morning some of the less traveled streets still had a heavy snow cover, and Cole said an incautious motorist, could run into trouble.

Because of dropping temperature, Cole anticipated some icing of the city's streets this morning, and urged all to be careful.

Premier Resigns

ROME (UPI) — Premier Giulio Andreotti resigned Saturday night less than one hour after the Senate defeated his eight-day-old minority government in a vote of confidence. His step cleared the way for new national elections.

$15,600 Verdict Awarded

KINGSTON — A $15,600 verdict was brought in Surpeme Court Friday about 9:30 p.m. after a jury deliberated less than four hours in a case involving a child that was bitten by a dog.

The plaintiff, Donald Gardner, parent of the child, Michelle Gardner, was awarded $1,600 and his daughter $14,000.

Felix Lazala was the defendant.

In a third party action involving Boiceville Hardware, no cause for action was found.

Charles Gaffney represented Gardner, William Mullaney represented Boiceville Hardware, and Cook, Tucker, and Dwyer represented Lazala.

Miss Leila M. Moore

Miss Leila M. Moore, 67, of Shultis Corners, formerly of Glenford, died Friday in Kingston. Born in Glenford May 6, 1904, she was the daughter of the late John and Sarah Burgher Moore, and before retirement, she was a practical nurse. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. Wesley (Viola) O'Brien, of Glenford; three brothers: Sherman and Lloyd Moore, of Brooklyn. Also surviving are nieces and nephews. Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p.m. at the Lasher Funeral Home Inc., Woodstock. Burial will be at a later date in Evergreen Cemetery, Woodstock. Friends may call at the funeral home today from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

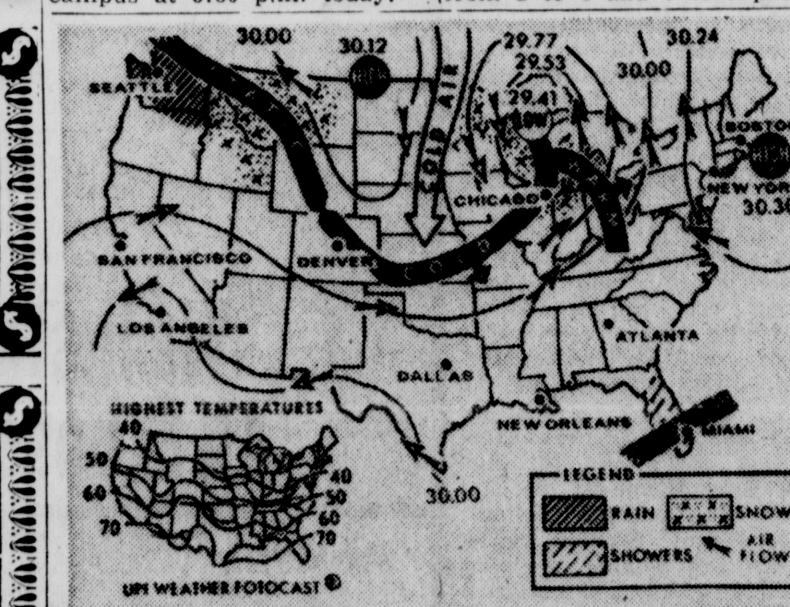

The Commodore Blaze Longest

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fire Chief John T. O'Hagan was in the hospital Saturday, recuperating from chest pains suffered while fighting "the longest fire of 1972" — a five-alarm blaze which burned unchecked for eight hours under the midtown Hotel Commodore.

Nearly 30 firemen were injured fighting the stubborn flames, none of them seriously. The only persons still in hospital Saturday afternoon were O'Hagan and Mary Spezzagiani, a hotel telephone operator overcome by smoke at her 26th-floor switchboard.

For Period Ending 7 P.M. EST Sunday.
Today will find snow falling over parts of the Northern Rockies and in the vicinity of the Great Lakes region. Rain is in store for the Pacific Northwest and a few showers may be noted across Florida. Elsewhere, generally fair weather should prevail. Clockwork Orange Flick - Milk-Plus Has an Important Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Malcolm McDowell, bundled against the cold in a leather jacket, sauntered into the crowded restaurant, hands in his pockets, bright blue eyes scanning the patrons, searching for nothing in particular.

He seemed neither flustered nor particularly flattered by the strangers who stopped him frequently on the way to his table, each volunteering admiration for his work. He made his polite acknowledgements, a simple thank you, the beginnings of a smile which never quite finished, and sat down to order a bullshot—bouillon and vodka.

The waitress, in hot pants and service with a smile, returned with a glass of milk. "Thank you, but we didn't order milk," a surprised but courteous McDowell replied. "I know," she smiled. "Two girls... over there," she nodded, "asked me to bring it over and to tell you how much they liked you in the movie."

"That's very nice," he said. "Thank them for me."

Milk—actually "milk-plus"—plays a key part in McDowell's latest film, "A Clockwork Orange," and the recognition seemed the ultimate in audience admiration for the young actor, whose name has hardly been emblazoned in the household heavens.

Malcolm McDowell, a generally private, quiet young man, may have to get used to the sudden shine of the public spotlight. The face of the 28-year-old British actor—the piercing eyes, spread-out nose, not quite your Handsome Hollywood Hero type—is leering from newspaper advertisements and billboards all over town as the star of Stanley Kubrick's latest creation, a brilliant and brilliantly imaginative effort with McDowell as row, in which he does another superb job, as a paraplegic in a tender romance.

He chooses his material carefully; thus the long time between films.

How does he choose? "You know... You know immediately whether it will interest you. I don't know why that is," McDowell is equally reluctant to outline his acting methods. "I just do it. Too much self-analysis can be a bad thing."

An intense, professional actor, McDowell says he's never really been personally satisfied with any of his performances. "There's always something I would have done differently if I were doing it again. I'm never satisfied."

"If I were, I would have reached the ultimate."

And, though he believes strongly that film is a director's medium—the actor is secondary—he stresses: "The performance is mine; there are no strings attached to my fingers."

His next project is from an original idea of his own, started about five years ago when he was working on the stage at Stratford—"a very boring 'though children will, they're place.' It's called 'O Lucky Man' and McDowell describes cepts of right and wrong."

County to Honor UCCC Basketball Team

By IRA FUSFELD

STONE RIDGE
People have been calling the Ulster County Community College basketball team "super" for a long time, but Monday night it becomes official when Super Senators Week is declared.

County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago Saturday issued a public decree designating Feb. 28 through March 4 as Super Senators Week and a ceremony before Monday's game with Westchester in Senate Gym will put it on record.

Savago released the following statement:

"The Ulster County Community College Super Senators basketball team has again distinguished itself and the school by winning the Mid-Hudson Conference championship.

"The local honor has precipitated another invitation to the Regional XV Tournament Thursday, Friday and Saturday at New York Community College, Brooklyn. This is the sixth year the Super Senators have been invited.

"As seven senior members of the team are graduating this year, it is only fitting and proper that the team that has excited the sports element of both the school and the community be recognized.

"Therefore, I, County Legislature Chairman, Peter J. Savago hereby designate Feb. 28 through March 4 as Super Senators Week in Ulster County and further urge all students and members of the community to give full recognition to the team's accomplishments."

Savago is expected to present Ulster coach Mike Perry with a plaque in the ceremonies prior to Monday's game. It will be UCCC's final contest before the Regionals and the Senators will be looking to extend their record to 24-2 in the tilt.

Ulster Friday won No. 23 by knocking off Rockland, 97-69, sometimes looking super and other times looking super sluggish.

"I thought we played real well in the first half," Perry said following the game in which he substituted freely and never was in any trouble once his team had scored the first eight points. "But I wasn't satisfied with the second half, it was real sloppy out there."

It didn't matter too much that the Senators looked ragged for much of the second half. The game had no bearing on either the Mid-Hudson Conference or Regional XV situations and served only as a tune-up for next week's tournament.

But Perry the perfectionist noted that the latter reason was enough to be pleading for more from his team.

"I still think we need a little bit better performance for the Regionals," he declared.

The way Ulster opened up on Rockland it looked like the Senators could have beaten any team in the country. Henry Nixon slipped a neat pass to Jackie Knowles shortly after the tap for a bucket, Coleman Link canned one, and Nixon came back with a pair to give Ulster all the breathing room it needed.

Rockland, which was minus its ineligible stars Wade Pittman, Larry Frazier, and Jimmy Mack, never threatened UCCC and was only able to stay relatively close by connecting on some of the many free throw chances it had.

During the first half, Ulster applied a particularly tough zone press which gave the Rockets fits and had the crowd on its feet. Knowles and Walter Lloyd spearheaded the effective tactic.

And when the going got sloppy after intermission, the success of some of the little used Senators, as well as the badgering of the officials, took up the crowd's interest.

Much of the excitement surrounded Pat Harder and Val Williams who contributed 12 and 10 points respectively in their rare opportunity to get some floor time.

Link turned in a strong performance and registered 16 points to top UCCC. Lloyd had 13, Nixon and Knowles 10 each.

Darrell Sills led all scorers with 17 points.

REBOUNDS... Region XV selectors meet today at Westchester to firm up the tournament's seedings. It figures to be Farmingdale, Ulster, and Manhattan as 1, 2, 3 with the Senators meeting Dutchess in the first round... Ulster has yet to be beaten at home. Its only losses were to Farmingdale and Kingsborough both away.

Mac, Player, Weiskopf Tied for Gleason Lead

By LES KJOS

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — South African Gary Player, competing in his first tour event of the year, shot a 69 Saturday to tie Tom Weiskopf and Mac McLendon for the third-round lead in the $260,000 Jackie Gleason Invitational Golf Classic.

Weiskopf and Player were both three strokes off the pace going into Saturday's round and both shot two-under par. McLendon was two shots back Friday but carded a 70 to share the lead in the year's richest tournament at six-under par 210.

One shot behind the leaders were Phil Rodgers who shot a 70 and John Schlee, who carded a 73 after coming into the round tied for the lead with Gene Littler, Dick Lotz and Buddy Allin.

Jack Nicklaus was still in the chase for the $52,000, firing a 71 on the 7,128-yard, par 72 Inverrary course to put him two shots back. But Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino played themselves out of contention.

Palmer shot an 80, his first round over 79 since the 1968 PGA championships, and Trevino carded a 74 for 217.

Littler all but eliminated himself by shooting a 76, four strokes behind. Lotz was two strokes back after shooting a 74 and Allin was three shots off the pace after his 75.

Player was one over par on his front nine with three bogies and two birds, but then on the 10th sank a 20-foot birdie putt. He sank another 20-footer for a bird on the par three 12th and hit a 15-footer for a bird on the par four 13th.

His last birdie came on No. 16 when he played a four-iron eight feet from the pin and sank the putt for a two.

Player said he was still getting used to the larger American ball. "I haven't played the big ball in six months and I'm particularly pleased to score this well," he said. Weiskopf hit five birdies and two bogeys with three of his birds coming on long putts of 20, 15 and 12 feet.

"I felt like I got the most out of my game," he said. "I wasn't driving well, but I made some good recovery shots. I'm not happy with my game, but I'm happy with my score, that's for sure. All I care about is that 52-grand."

McLendon said his performance was "nothing spectacular, just a steady round."

The 1967 Louisiana State graduate, looking for his first tour win since the 1968

Magnolia Classic hit every green, managing three birdies and one bogie, three-putting the par four 14th. Nicklaus was not happy with his game which included three three-putts greens and one fairway shot out of bounds. "It was kind of sloppy," he said.

Nekos Gains Region Finals

VALHALLA by a pin at 3:56 and then rallied to stop Rob Beckerman of Suffolk at 7:30 to gain the final round.

His final opponent, Alber, was runner-up at 126 pounds last year.

Meanwhile, 126 pound Tom Coddington of Ulster was set to go up against Frank Notaristefano in the consolation finals for third place.

Coddington opened the tournament with a 5-0 decision over Tom Evans of Suffolk. Then the former Rondout Valley High School whiz lost to Paul Allegre of Westchester in the semi-finals, 2-1. The margin of difference was on a riding time call.

Coddington moved into the consolation bracket where he nudged Mike Mahr of Farmingdale, 5-0.

The other UCCC entry, Jim Ring, lost his two matches. Ring, in the 134 pound class, was pinned by Mike Sashin of Farmingdale at 1:15. Jim then was defeated by Ed Morse of Rockland in 3:24 of the consolation bracket match.

Ulster, hurt by injuries, could bring only three men to the tournament and thus is far out of the competition for the team championship.

Going into Saturday's competition, the Senators were in sixth place.

State Hawks Now 8-14

NEW YORK CITY rebounds and led all scorers on baskets by Don Valdez and Jeff Diamond in the last 30 seconds of regulation play, the New Paltz State Hawks tied host Yeshiva University here Saturday night 82-82, but faltered in overtime to absorb their 14th loss of the season, 97-90.

Friday night, the Hawks picked up victory number eight by downing New York Marquette, 85-65, at New Paltz.

Big Valdez snared 27 rebounds and led all scorers with 29 points, but a sloppy first half put New Paltz in a deep hole. Yeshiva, now 2-15 on the season, rolled to a 40-29 half-time lead as the Hawks committed 18 of their 28 turnovers during the stretch.

With Steve Galuski and Steve Fuller aiding Valdez, the Hawks crept back to 82-78 before Diamond tied it up. A Yeshiva shot failed at the end of regulation time, but the home squad got quickly in front in the overtime, outscoring the visitors 15-8. Galuski finished with 22 for New Paltz and Fuller netted 16.

Yeshiva's Rich Wilzig and Ira Scharaga each scored 25 for the visitors.

Against Maritime Valdez again took the scoring honors with a 24-point performance.

The Hawks jumped out to a big early lead only to watch it dissolve to three before Galuski canned a jumper at the half to make it 38-33.

New Paltz picked up the slack in a hurry after the break and had the spread at 20 when the game ended.

Bullets Blast Knicks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Archie Knicks 104-97 in what could be Clark scored 30 points and took a preview of first round action

Marin added 26 Saturday night in Eastern Conference Playoffs, as the Baltimore Bullets blunted a New York fourth quarter rally to defeat the deficit to four points at 90-86 with 7:30 remaining in the game. The Bullets, held to only one field goal in the first 42 minutes of the period, then minuted of the period, then pulled away with Clark and Marin doing the bulk of the scoring.

Walt Frazier led New York with 22 points. However, the ace New York guard who usually gets hot in the fourth quarter, was held to only two points in the last period.

The first half shooting was fantastic as Baltimore hit for 66 per cent in taking a 60-55 intermission lead. The Knicks connected on 58 per cent of their shots in the first half.

Baltimore enjoyed its 16-point at 88-72 with 1:50 to go in the third quarter.

The Knicks then went on a 14-2 surge to pull within four points of the Bullets.

The defeat prevented New York from clinching an Atlantic Division berth. The next Knicks victory or Philadelphia loss will put the Knicks in the post-season games.

Detroit Startles Marquette

DETROIT (AP) — A hot-shooting University of Detroit basketball team scored a smashing 70-49 victory Saturday over second-ranked Marquette, which was playing without star center Jim Chones who turned pro last week.

It was the second game for the Warriors without Chones, who signed with the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association for more than $1 million.

In the first game with Chones they beat Creighton.

The Titans streaked to an early 15-point lead in the first half and held a 36-24 bulge at halftime. They never let up in the second half, leading at one point by 24 points.

It was the first less of the year for Marquette, rated just behind UCLA in The Associated Press poll. The Warriors edged Detroit earlier in the season, 68-66 in Marquette.

The absence of Chones was sorely felt, but it was debatable whether his presence would have saved the day for Marquette.

Detroit shot 65 per cent in the first half, featuring deadly outside shooting, and displayed a tenacious defense that usually limited the Warriors to just one shot at a time.

Marquette closed the gap slightly just before halftime, but after intermission it was Detroit all the way, as the Titans kept their hopes alive for a National Invitational Tournament bid.

MICHIGAN FIRST IN BIG 10

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—Erratic Ernie Johnson teamed up with steady Henry Wilmore Saturday to lead Michigan from an eight-point halftime deficit to sole possession of first place in the Big Ten with a 64-52 squashing of Minnesota.

Johnson scored only nine points but all of them were in the second half and his defense shut down the Gophers' leading scorer, Clyde Turner, without a point after he got 10 in the first half.

Wilmore got 12 of his game-high 20 points in the second half as the Wolverines improved to 8-2 in the conference, the mark which the Gophers had entering the game.

Minnesota had a 31-23 half-time edge but lost its rebounding edge and came nowhere near its 46.9 field goal percentage of the first half. The Gophers scored only 11 points through the first 14:56 of the second half, minimizing the earlier effectiveness of its zone press.

Michigan utilized its rebounding edge for fast-break baskets when Minnesota missed shots and made a half dozen steals to get easy layups. Towering Ken Brady contributed 17 points for the Wolverines.

Dave Winfield led Minnesota with 15 points, Keith Young ad 14 and Turner's 10 were the best the Gophers could gather. They did not appear noticeably upset because the Big Ten athletic directors sustained the suspensions of 6-foot-9 juniors Ron Behagen and Corky Taylor. It took Michigan seven minutes to get the lead in the second half and it never lost it thereafter as Minnesota fell apart as soon as it fell behind.

Purdue Scores

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI)—Bob Ford completed a three point play Saturday to lead Purdue to a 70-69 victory over Indiana, snapping the Hoosiers' five-game winning streak and eliminating their chances for a Big Ten basketball title.

Indiana and Purdue have 5-5 Big Ten records.

Indiana led 67-67 with 1:03 to go when Hoosier center Steve Downing committed his fifth personal foul. Ford drove to the basket, Ford's shot counted and he added the free throw. Indiana had several shots at regaining the lead in the final minute, but missed them all.

Indiana jumped off to an early lead and had an 11-point margin at one point before heading into intermission with a 10-point cushion, 43-33.

Purdue cut into the spread with Ford, who finished with 22 points, and Bruce Rose doing the firing.

Indiana's front line produced all but 14 of the team's total. Joby Wright was high with 23. Downing had 20 and John Ritter 12.

The game was Purdue's first without center William Franklin, who was declared ineligible Friday after signing with an agent to help him seek a professional contract. Ken Otto started in his place.

DURHAM, N. C. (UPI)—Hot-shooting Duke fielded a balanced scoring attack to defeat 10th-ranked Maryland 68-59 Saturday for the Blue Devils' third Atlantic Coast Conference upset in a week.

The lead changed hands until Robbie West hit a jumper in the second half to give the Blue Devils a 46-45 lead, and in the next three minutes they outscored the Terrapins 11-4 to sew the game up.

Center Alan Shaw topped Duke with 16 points. Stu Yarbrough added 14 and West 13.

MONTREAL (UPI)—Yvan Cournoyer boosted his goals total to 32 as he fired two markers Saturday afternoon as the Montreal Canadiens overwhelmed the Detroit Red Wings 8-1.

The win moved Montreal to within eight points of the second place New York Rangers in the NHL's eastern section. The third place Canadians have 82 points.

Cournoyer's 31st goal came in the first period as Montreal went ahead 3-0. He picked up the rebound after Detroit netminder Joe Daley had stopped a drive by Henri Richard. Goal No. 32 occurred early in the second period after Jacques Lemaire fed Cournoyer a pass and Daley left one side of the net open. Lemaire, who totaled four points in the contest, opened the scoring when he drove a 60-foot past Daley at 6:06 of the first frame. Less than two minutes later Daley let another 60-foot drive pass him when Guy Lapointe drilled the puck from the blue line.

A 30-footer by Guy Lafleur eluded Daley in the middle session and Peter Mahovlich boosted Montreal's margin to six goals with another second period tally, his 27th goal of the campaign.

The older Mahovlich brother, Frank, got his 31st goal of the year when he scored while his own team was short-handed early in the third period and Marc Tardif rounded out the scoring for Montreal.

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Line-

Navy Trims Army, 61-60

By IRA FUSEL

WEST POINT
Army-Navy basketball games may not create the same amount of interest that its football counterpart arises, but you can be sure the brass in the West Point Field House Saturday will be smarting from the 61-60 defeat suffered by the Cadets at the hands of the Middies for quite a while.

It was bad enough that Army was losing to Navy for the first time on a basketball court in nine years. The topser was that the Cadets never should have come out on the short end of the stick. However Army simply gave the game away.

Coach Dan Dougherty's five committed a horrendous total of turnovers and shot a poor 34 per cent from the field. Breaking that down a little further, West Point hit on just seven of 29 attempts after intermission.

Army's saving grace was its height as it clobbered Navy on the boards, 50-31.

Army Led

Despite all the sour statistics, Army had the lead 59-58 with 54 seconds left and the Cadets' Chris Peterson at the foul line. Basked by Bobby Sherwin, and Ed Mueller, plus a Mueller free throw, had pulled the home team up from a 58-54 deficit in the final three minutes.

Peterson connected on his first try to make it 60-58 and sank the second, but the latter was disallowed because of a lane violation. Needless to say, that point would have been crucial.

Navy took possession and began to move the ball around against Army's tough zone defense. Finally with 19 seconds left, Gary Carter was fouled. He needed a pair of hits to tie but he made only the first.

Then on the big play of the game, Navy, which had been having a hard time rebounding all afternoon, came up with the one it needed.

Little Charlie Robinson latched onto the ball and was immediately fouled. He bagged both shots making it 61-60 with 17 seconds left.

Army tried to work it to its most consistent shooter, Sherwin, but the backcourtman was forced to take a long one at the buzzer while guarded tightly and it fell short.

Early Lead

Navy had jumped out to a quick 11-2 first half lead by breaking the zone with some deadeye work from the corners. But the Middies soon cooled off and the Cadets took control.

Army tied it at 14, then spotted Navy nine of the next 11 points to fall behind again. 23-16. Sherwin countered with nine points in the closing minutes of the half and Army went off the floor ahead, 32-29.

The Cadets opened the second session smartly, led 40-33 after six minutes, and seemed ready to blow the game apart. It was here that a terrible spell of turnovers and missed shots helped keep Navy alive and finally boosted the winners ahead, 41-40, with 9:43 left.

As it turned out, the final 9:43 was ev on the scoreboard and Navy had its one-point win. Carter, a workhorse all day, was high scorer with 23 points. He was a fine seven for 13 from the floor. Bob Marshburn added 13.

Sherwin had 18 for Army, but was good on just one of ten in the second half.

Kovalov the Leader

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (UPI)—Vladimir Kovalov of Russia claimed the lead in the men's compulsory figures Saturday in the opening event of the seventh World University Winter Games.

Kovalov gained 513.5 points, with six ordinals, in the five required figures in men's figure-skating. John Mischa Petkevich of Great Falls, Mont., and Harvard University, was second with 501.8, and 11 ordinals. Perry Hutchins of Chicago and Arizona State University was third at 496.8 and 13 ordinals.

Figure-skating experts said it was very possible that Petke-vich would overcome Kovalov's lead when the free-skating was held Sunday. Petkevich was fifth in the final standings in the recent Sapporo olympics, pulling up via a fine free-skating routine, while Kovalov was not in the Olympics.

A Russian dance team took a slim lead over teams from Czechoslovakia and the United States following the compulsory figures. Elvena Zharkova and Gennady Kartanov of the USSR received 72.6 points, to the 72.5 points for Debbie Ganson and Bradley Hislop of the U.S., and Diana and Martin Skotnicka of Czechoslovakia, tied for second.

In fourth place were Svetlana Bakina and Boris Bubleu of Russia, 68.2; fifth was Susan Ogletree and Gerhard Lane of the U.S. at 67.4, and sixth in the six-team competition was agnes Arco and Adrian Perco of Austria at 64.3.

In compulsory pairs, the Russian duo of Galina Karelna and Gregory Proskourin built an apparently insurmountable lead over Debbie Hughes and Philip Grout of the United States. The Russians had 53.4 points and five ordinals to the American pair's 51.3 points and 10 ordinals.

Playing in Pittsburgh, the powerful USSR hockey team defeated Canada, 9-3, in the opening of a round-robin tournament that will include the United States. The Russians simply outskated and outplayed Canada in all departments.

As the 10 competitors in the figure-skating went through their school figures, Alpine skiers were making their first official practice runs on the 4,436-foot course on Whiteface Mountain.

A virtually windless snowstorm dumped about five inches of fresh powder on the area and the prediction called for an additional 10 inches of new snow by Monday.

The snow created problems for the Alpinists and cross-country skiers, who spent much of their time packing the courses.

West Germany Scores Rare Downhill Victory

CRYSTAL MOUNTAIN, Wash. (UPI)—Franz Vogler scored West Germany's first downhill victory in six years of World Cup competition Saturday when he flashed down the 1.5 mile Crystal Mountain course in 86.36 seconds.

Bernard Russi of Switzerland was second at 87.13 in the second downhill for men. Russi won the first downhill Friday in 85.97.

Wiltrud Drexel of Austria captured the second women's downhill over a 1.3 mile course, barely edging teammate Annamie Proell, who virtually wrapped up this year's title with her downhill victory Friday.

Miss Drexel's winning time was 91.33, the fastest time in third Saturday, followed by Mike Lafferty of Eugene, Ore., in fourth place and Andreas Sprecher of Switzerland in fifth. Three other Swiss skiers finished in the top 10.

In Saturday's downhill for women, Olympic gold medalist Marie Therese Nadig of Switzerland finished third in 91.65. Isabelle Mir of France was fourth in 92.22 and Susan Corrook of Ketchum, Idaho, was fifth in 92.74.

Russi's first and second in the downhill increased his World Cup points to 100, putting him second behind Jean-Noel Augert of France, who skipped the Crystal meet and took his 113.

Calif., where next week's meet will feature two giant slaloms.

Henri Duvillard of France currently is third in World Cup overall standings with 97 points. Followed by Andrei Pasholov of Poland with 90, Karl Schranz of Austria with 83 and Gustavo Thoeni of Italy with 82.

Miss Drexel picked up 45 world cup points in the two downhill here to increase her total to 102, putting her in third place behind Miss Proell, who has 233, and Francoise Macchi of France, who has 187. Miss Nadig moved into fourth place in overall World Cup points with a total of 100 through Saturday, and Miss Mir advanced to fifth with a total of 94.

World Cup officials announced one more downhill race for men will be added to the meet at Val Garden, Italy, to make up for a downhill cancelled earlier in the season at Wengen, Switzerland.

It Was Highland's First UCAL Hoop Title

Big Blue Stops Paltz

By STEVE KANE

PINE BUSH

It's the year of the Big Blue in the Ulster County Athletic League.

Friday night in this community's new central high school gymnasium, Highland rode the 23-point shooting of freshman John Gersch to a 55-52 victory over New Paltz and thus won its first basketball championship since the 1947-48 season and its first ever in the UCAL.

Until Jay Ackert, the Hugies' center, fouled out with 1:31 left in the third quarter, the Northern Division champs were masters of the court. By switching defenses and working hard for the rebounds, the Huguenots took advantage of Highland's cold shooting and posted a 31-20 halftime lead.

"I don't understand why they didn't sit on it," said the Big Blue's coach Dick Becker after the game. Whatever the reason the Hugies kept going for the hoop, and their turnovers gave Highland the chance it needed.

Highland was attempting a comeback when the game's crucial play occurred. After trailing throughout the first half, the Highlanders began to realize that New Paltz meant business. Led by Gersch and Ron Monroe, Highland had the difference down to six points when the Hugies pounced on a loose ball and whipped it to Mike Fairweather underneath. But Fairweather missed the shot, and as the ball went the other way, Ackert fouled Ron Monroe and had to leave the game.

With a one-guard offense, it helps to have one of your big men be able to handle the ball. That's what Ackert means to New Paltz, and when he left the Hugies knew they were in trouble.

"The test of a good ball club is when somebody goes out there's someone else there to take up the slack," said Frank Davis, the New Paltz coach. "But we just froze."

The staggered Huguenots committed two turnovers that cost them baskets as the quarter ended and were faced with the task of protecting a two-point lead for eight minutes with not a breath of momentum in sight.

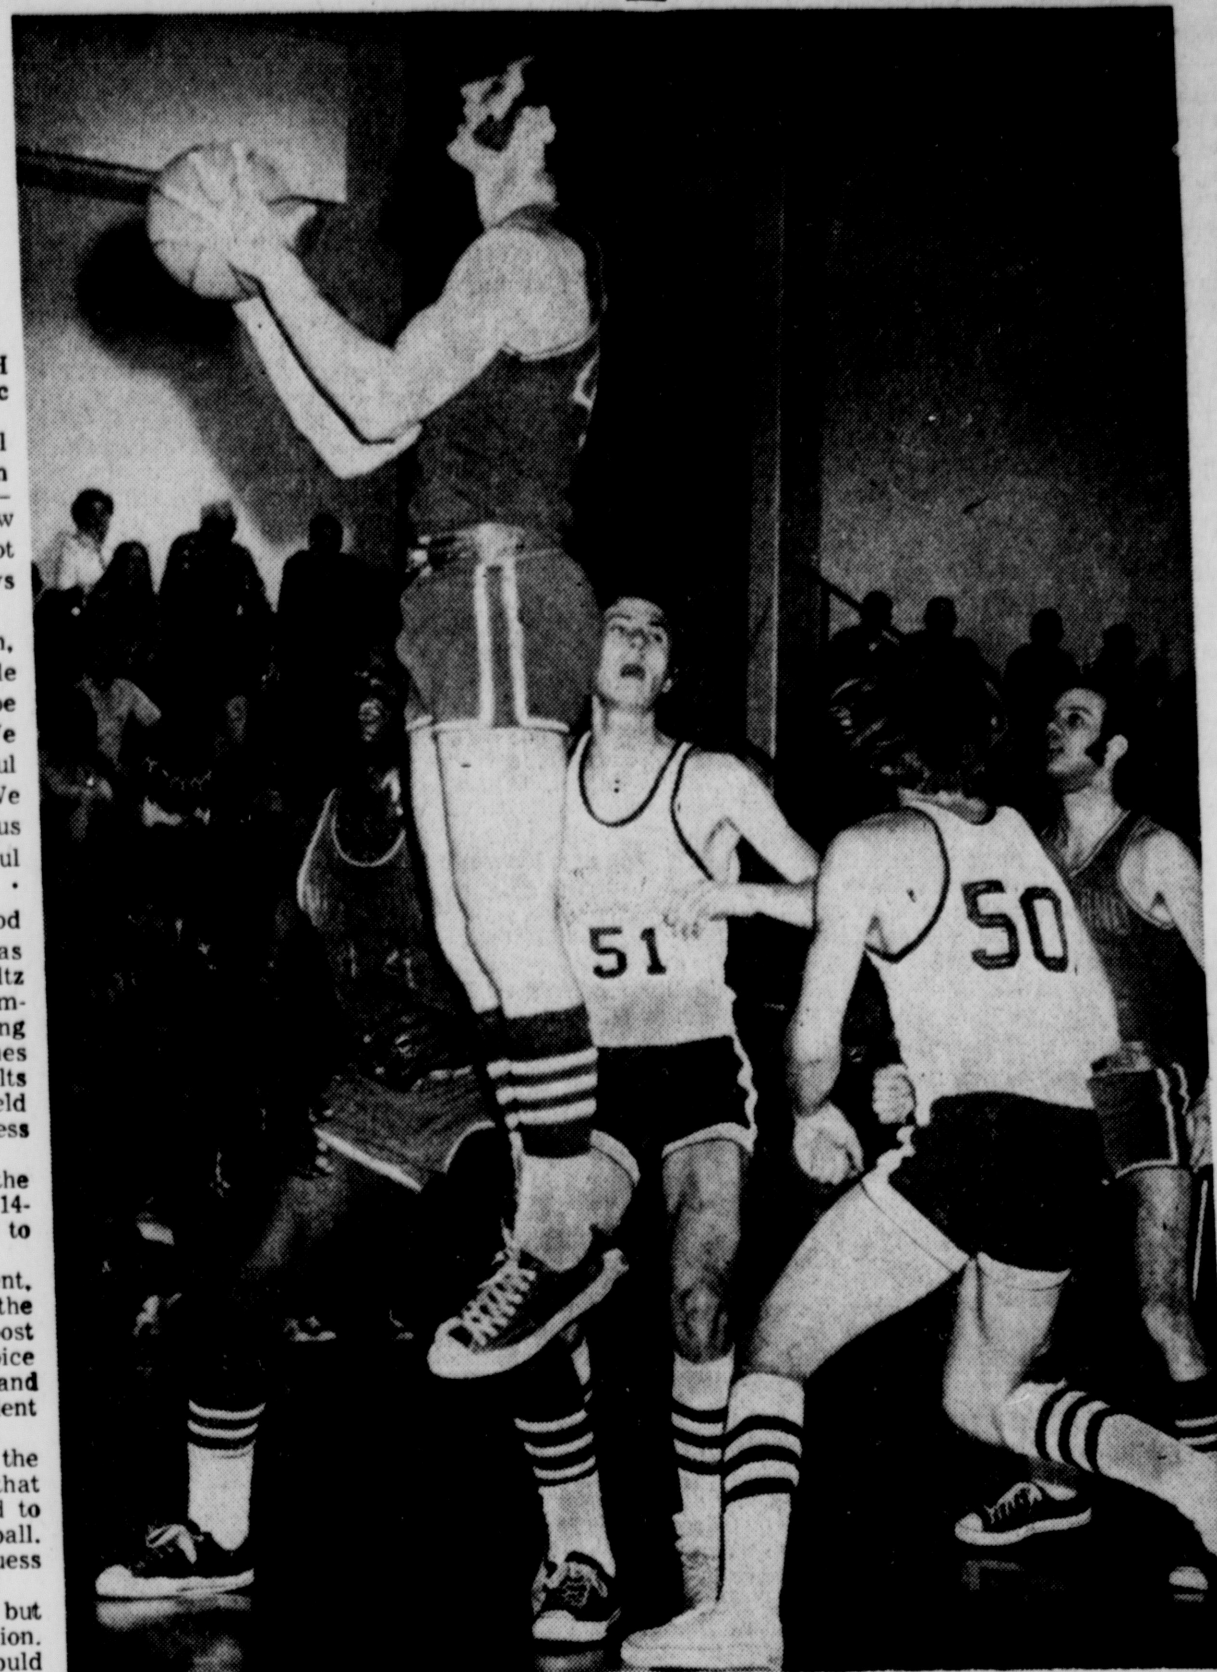

A foul shot by Ron Monroe finally tied the game for the first time with 6:44 left on the clock. A three-point play by Ron and a Gersch jumper put Highland up by five before Bruce Keeping brought New Paltz to their senses with a clutch basket. Then a burst by the Blue stretched it to 54-47, and it looked as if the Hugies were through.

Fairweather, Rick Pesavento and Ed Siani combined for five points to bring New Paltz to within two, but it was as far as they could get. Highland stalled the remaining minute away, and after John Barrington drew the foul and made it good, there were only four seconds left. The buzzer went before the Hugies could get them.

Becker's pre-game worries about his club's mental readiness were illustrated in the game's first half. New Paltz played its game to perfection. With Mike Clinton, Keeping and Fairweather hitting the boards like they never had before, the Hugies kept control at both ends of the court. Their defense didn't give up many good shots, and Pesavento kept them rolling with 11 points.

"We had a flat half," said Becker, admitting how close to defeat he had come. Only the shooting of Gersch kept the Blue in sight. "It's strange how an inexperienced freshman did it for us," he said. "We think highly of him around here."

"Again, though," he continued, "I'd have to say it was a team effort." He referred to the unselfish play of Barrington

Saugerties Rally Falls Short, 54-53

HYDE-PARK Rich Koegel brought Saugerties two points closer by sinking both ends of a one-and-one and then Roosevelt left the door wide open by losing the ball out of bounds with 15 seconds left. The Sawyers finally worked the ball to Tom Whitaker deep in the corner but it just wasn't to be, as Whitaker's shot rimmed and came out.

"It was one of the best high school games I've seen in a long time," said the dejected Marcus. "Whitaker got off a good shot—I wouldn't want anybody else shooting from out there."

The game plan of the Presidents was simple: stop Koegel. Mark Softy drew the unsoft assignment of shadowing the Sawyer ace and did admirably before fouling out with 3:32 left in the game. Koegel only had six of his 12 points while Softy was in there.

"We wanted to hold Koegel in the low teens," commented Roosevelt coach Jerry Marquardt on the President's strategy. Marquardt was quick to point out that Larry Panella upset this plan somewhat by scoring 16 points.

Panella figured significantly whenever the Sawyers rallied. He threw up some high arching 20-footers that amazingly swished through. Koegel did the rebounding and Panella did the shooting in the final surge that almost succeeded.

From an artistic standpoint, the game was beautifully played. Turnovers were rare and the defense was rugged but clean. An overflow crowd enjoyed what had to be one of the most even matchups of the year.

Roosevelt had a definite revenge motive because of their earlier two point loss at Saugerties in the now famous "lights out" game. Guards Schoonmaker and Connie Marquardt provided the offensive thrust for the Presidents with 24 and 20 points respectively. Marquardt connected on nine of 15 from the field and only one of those shots was made from closer than 15 feet.

The Presidents were superior off the boards, led by Boykin's 14 rebounds, coach Marquardt said that the 5'11" forward "rebounds as well as anyone in the league."

Aside from Panella, Saugerties really didn't get any outstanding production from anyone. Whitaker had 15 points but took many shots and was off target most of the night. The Sawyers couldn't get the ball into Koegel and rarely penetrated Roosevelt's box zone.

The Sawyers were helped considerably by the President's poor touch at the charity stripe. They shot a dismal 12-26. Boykin was the major culprit, although he did redeem himself by hitting the first part of a one-and-one for the winning point.

One thing that Marcus can be especially proud of is the Sawyers' final record. Their 10-8 mark represents the first winning basketball team at Saugerties High since the 1961-62 season. In the DCSL, Saugerties finished with a record of 6-8, while the Presidents ended up 8-6.

Ron Buzon's Sawyer Jayvees ended the season with a disheartening 85-37 loss. Kevin Mosher led the charge for the Junior Presidents with 16 points. Clark Hackett and Tom Hallione each had eight points for Saugerties, who finished with a 9-9 record.

KHS Swimmers Eye Section One Championship

By IRA FUSFELD

KINGSTON The way this season has gone, Kingston High School will probably surprise everyone and win the Section One swimming championship.

After all, the Maroons weren't supposed to be very successful this year and instead have swept up everything in sight including all 12 dual meets (the first time a KHS swim team has gone unbeaten), and the Dutchess County Scholastic League title.

So why not the Section One crown too?

"I'd love to win it but I don't think we can raise more than an outside chance," declares the Maroon mentor Ron Gabriele. "We'll just try to finish as high as we can. I understand Mamaroneck is a powerhouse so I look for a tough battle for second between us and Poughkeepsie."

Now before you evaluate Gabriele's prediction, remember that in December Ron said that his team would be fighting to remain above sea level this season. He based his outlook on all the new faces he saw when practice began. After all, he'd been used to watching people like Gene Gruner, Craig Murray, Mike O'Hara, and Fred Robinson.

"How could I have known what some of our freshmen and sophomores were going to do? And how about a kid like Claude Landerway who hadn't been on the team before," Gabriele cried.

How about them indeed. Everytime they went out, they improved. Landerway, a junior who had competed only in the YMCA, won all but one individual event and was undefeated in the backstroke.

Kids like Jay Rifenburg, Bobby Winrow, and John Edwards, the youngsters, and "oldtimers" Dennis Roth and Jim Gogg created the nucleus for surprise after surprise.

The DCSL title was all but clinched early when Kingston beat Lourdes and Poughkeepsie. And after beating Newburgh and Pine Bush the indicators pointed to the unbelievable though of being unbeaten. They wrapped that up Wednesday at Nyack.

So now Kingston goes for whatever marbles remain in the Sectionals which will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at White Plains. Others involved will be John Jay, Ketcham, Lakeland, Mamaroneck, Mount Vernon, Lourdes, Poughkeepsie, Rye, White Plains, Yorktown, and Walter Panas. Individuals from Westlake, Fox Lane, and Pleasantville also are entered.

Each coach submitted a list of its best times for the season and if you take them at face value Kingston will have to surpass its greatest efforts to survive.

Only in the 100 yard freestyle is KHS in the thick of things as Gogg's best (54.2) is just two-tenths of a second slower than the favorite from Lourdes.

Other events show Kingston in the middle of the pack at best. "What I am going to do is take a bit of a calculated risk," Gabriele noted. "The relay counts very heavily in the sectionals so I'm going to try and put my best swimmers in them to score high. First place is worth 32 points, second 26, and so on. That's quite a chunk. What we're hoping for is to finish in the first three in both relays."

To do that, Gabriele has Landerway, Edwards, Roth, and Kent St. John set for the 200 yard medley relay, and Jack Winrow, and Gogg in the 400 yard freestyle relay.

"The thing about Section One as compared to Section Nine," they count the first 12 places instead of the first six. When we won Section Nine last year it was with 78 points. The total astronomical, something like 125 win on Kingston's side.

Gogg, he concurred, has the best shot at an individual title.

Thus Gabriele is hoping that the relays will pile up nearly

He also has high hopes for State meet later in March.

Pee Wee Hockey Planned for Area

KINGSTON Kingston area youngsters who have been wishing for some kind of organized hockey competition may get their wish for the 1972-73 winter season.

Dan Caragher, sales representative of the Penn-Dixie Cement Company, who resides at Hurley, has announced plans for the formation of a Pee Wee Hockey League for boys 9 through 12.

The proposed project has been discussed with Superintendent of Recreation Andrew Murphy III of Kingston, who has enthusiastically endorsed the idea.

"We are prepared to cooperate in every way with Caragher's program," Murphy said. "The Recreation Department will make available the skating rink at Dietz Stadium and furnish the helmets and jerseys for the teams."

Murphy said the present skating facilities at the stadium would be adequate for pee wee hockey. "The side boards of the rink would have to be raised a bit and whatever other equipment is needed would be made available to the league."

Caragher said the league would be organized during the summer months. "We plan two age groups," he explained. "The Bantam group would be for boys six to eight years and the Pee Wees from nine through 12. The program will include instruction and games."

Interested parents who wish to help in the organization of the league are asked to contact Caragher at his Hurley residence (339-3864). If enough parents show interest, a meeting would follow to work out the details to start the program.

"Hockey programs such as we plan are in progress or starting up throughout the upstate area, especially in Rochester and Syracuse," said Caragher. "In Rochester alone, there are more than 1,000 registered youths in hockey programs."

Binghamton, which currently has two artificial rinks under construction, is also planning Pee Wee hockey for next year, Caragher added.

"Junior hockey should be a natural for this area," Caragher concluded. "We're in the middle of the snow and ski belt and a league like this should flourish."

Massa's Win Title

KINGSTON Gary MacDonald and John Godwin triggered a 28-point fourth quarter explosion that gave Massa's Used Cars a come-from-behind 56-40 victory over Jack's Barber Shops in the finals of the Over-30 Basketball League playoffs.

MacDonald scored 13 of his game-leading 25 points and Godwin 9 of his 16, as Massa's overcame a 29-28 third quarter deficit to bury the Barbers 28-11 in the stretch.

The victory was the 11th straight for Massa's, who dropped their seasonal opener then went undefeated to capture the regular season "A" Division title and now the playoff.

Art Gribbins was high man for Jack's who trailed 10-9 at the quarter, led 23-19 at the half and 29-28 going in.

Tom Waters rimmed 20 points and Roger Edwards 14 to pace IBM to a 55-48 victory over Duke's TV, the "B" Division champions in the consolation game. Vern Piantanida (13) and Bob Short (12) led Duke's.

It seemed reasonable to the hundreds of victims, spread over 20 states, who were swindled out of more than $2 million before postal inspectors broke up the caper with mail fraud convictions in Des Moines not long ago. The plot called

You may wonder why the victims didn't ask themselves one question — or ask it of the promoters: "If there's all that money in breeding chin-chillas, why aren't you raising them?" It's a hard-to-answer question of the kind that will often expose the fallacy of an easy-money promotion. Try it, if you're ever tempted by one.

A federal grand jury recently returned a 57-count indictment against the two individuals who'd been collecting all the fees — and neglecting, said the postal inspectors, to do anything else for their "field correspondents" except "pocket their fees.

Augustine Proposal

Alternative to No-Fault

By CARL GRAHAM

KINGSTON
A Kingston insurance man has suggested an alternative to the controversial "no-fault" insurance plan introduced in the New York State Legislature by a Westchester legislator.

Roland A. Augustine, president of the Kingston insurance firm that bears his name, said he had worked more than six months to prepare his plan, which would make numerous changes in the bill introduced by Senator Bernard G. Gordon, chairman of the Senate Insurance Committee.

Gordon's proposal already has been criticized by John G. McCarthy, Gordon's counterpart in the Assembly, who predicted that the bill as it stands faces tough sledding on his side of the legislature.

Augustine mailed copies of his proposal to all legislators in both houses on Feb. 16, but has not had any response so far except for "the usual form letters."

Augustine's proposal would provide for payment by the injured person's own insurance company, which would then have the right to apply for compensation from the other driver's company through an arbitration board set up and financed by a pool of insuring companies, a right that would be denied under the Gordon plan.

Augustine said he suggested the arbitration procedure "similar to Workmen's Compensation," to keep from overloading clogged court calendars with damage suits unless the other operator is uninsured, in which case the company could sue in court.

Augustine's plan would give the injured party the option of retaining an attorney to protect his interests at a five percent fee, based on medical expenses, loss of income, and other expenses in connection with the accident, in cases where the total exceeded $10,000.

Other points in Augustine's proposal include:

- Compulsory insurance that would provide benefits up to $50,000 without regard to fault, to the owner of any property damaged, including vehicles. Autos are excluded from property damages under Gordon's bill unless the insured pays a special premium and is responsible for the first $100 in damages.
- Optional collision coverage would be eliminated and collision coverage would become a part of property damages.

- Negligence lawsuits would be eliminated except in out-of-state accidents, death or serious injury, or more than $10,000 worth of medical expenses, loss of wages, etc.
- Coverage for commercial vehicles would be the same as for privately owned vehicles but owners would have the option of eliminating collision damages to their own vehicles. This is necessary to protect owners of very expensive vehicles whose premiums would be excessive, Augustine said.

- Existing anti-cancellation laws on present insurance would continue in effect, and insurance companies would be required to continue coverage for three years even if they stopped doing business with the insured agent, except in cases of non-payment of premiums, loss of driver's license, or loss of registration.

- The present assigned risk pool would be continued for those unable to get insurance in the voluntary market.
- Companies would be required to reduce premium rates to reflect the money they make through investment of premiums.

Augustine said that a study reported in the New York Law Journal showed that, despite reduced benefits, motorists in Massachusetts were paying more under that state's no-fault plan introduced last year.

Property damage premium rates are lower in Massachusetts because automobiles were eliminated from property damage recoveries as suggested in Senator Gordon's bill, but stiff increases in $100 deductible collision rates put the total bill higher, Augustine said. As an example, he quoted a class 10 operator (top rating) in Boston who paid $523 in 1970, laid out $546 in 1971, the first year under the plan, and faces a tab of $589 in the current year.

He cited a poll by the Opinion Research Center that showed 62 per cent of drivers questioned felt the new plan was unfair, 23 per cent who said it was fair, and another 15 per cent with no opinion.

A survey of pending claims in cases of persons injured during the first half of 1971 shows that in December 32 per cent had not yet been paid. "This hardly bears out the prediction of automatic payment," Augustine said.

Property damage premium rates are lower in Massachusetts because automobiles were eliminated from property damage recoveries as suggested in Senator Gordon's bill, but stiff increases in $100 deductible collision rates put the total bill higher, Augustine said. As an example, he quoted a class 10 operator (top rating) in Boston who paid $523 in 1970, laid out $546 in 1971, the first year under the plan, and faces a tab of $589 in the current year.

He cited a poll by the Opinion Research Center that showed 62 per cent of drivers questioned felt the new plan was unfair, 23 per cent who said it was fair, and another 15 per cent with no opinion.

A survey of pending claims in cases of persons injured during the first half of 1971 shows that in December 32 per cent had not yet been paid. "This hardly bears out the prediction of automatic payment," Augustine said.

Augustine said that a study reported in the New York Law Journal showed that, despite reduced benefits, motorists in Massachusetts were paying more under that state's no-fault plan introduced last year.

Prime Ministers on Distaff Side

By JOHN F. BARTON

United Press International
The world's three women prime ministers have put the lie to the old adage that women are the weaker sex.

Mrs. Indira Priyadarshani Gandhi of India, Mrs. Golda Meir of Israel and Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon have proven themselves to be tough leaders when their countries faced political crises. All have been married. All are grandmothers. But in her own way, each has shown that the hand that rocks the cradle can also slap down political enemies.

Mrs. Gandhi, who has ruled as prime minister since 1966 following the death of the late Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, recently led her nation to military victory over Pakistan, turning the former East Pakistan into the new nation called Bangladesh.

It was the greatest feat of strength yet by a woman who has displayed unexpected political courage and stamina since becoming prime minister.

The 'Doll House Caucus'

Mrs. Gandhi, who says she used to deliver political lectures to her dolls as a small child, has accomplished political changes that her father, the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, was reluctant to do despite his enormous prestige and influence.

Mrs. Gandhi, hindered and later politically threatened by the conservative old guard of the ruling Congress party, dropped the old guard from important cabinet positions and took her case directly to the people by calling early general elections in 1969. Her bold action split the Congress party, but the old guard was swept out of office by the people, almost without exception. Mrs. Gandhi had eliminated her opponents within her own party and won a landslide election mandate from the public at the same time.

Born Nov. 19, 1917, Mrs. Gandhi spent much of her early life following her father's political career. Despite his frequent lengthy jail sentences during British rule, her father became one of the strongest influences in her life. One of her fondest memories, Mrs. Gandhi told reporters in Washington recently, is of the world history her father wrote especially for her while he was in a British jail. Her marriage to Feroze Gandhi in 1942 at age 25, considered late by Indian standards, was not happy. After raising two sons, she and her husband, who was not related to the late Indian leader Mahatma Gandhi, had been living apart for some time when he died in 1960.

Her Political Infancy

Mrs. Gandhi founded the Congress Children's Organization Vanar Sena when she was only 12 years old. With her father's encouragement, she became a member of the Indian National Congress in 1938 and a member of its working committee in 1955, by which time her family duties were no longer so demanding of her time. She became president of the Congress party in 1962. Although he probably never dreamed it would occur, Nehru thus prepared his only child to be his political as well as his family heir. With the sole exception of the 18-month premiership of Shastri, the office of prime minister of India has been in control of the Nehru family since independence from the British in 1947. It appears that it will be in the control of Mrs. Gandhi for as long as she wants it, at least for the foreseeable future.

MRS. GOLDA MEIR of Israel, (l-r) Mrs. Indira Priyadarshani Gandhi of India and Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon, the world's three ruling women Prime Ministers, have put the lie to the old adage that women are the weaker sex. All have proven themselves to be tough leaders when their countries faced political crises. (UPI from Files)

Like Mrs. Gandhi, the marriage of Golda Meir was pleasant, but not blissful. It is seldom, preferably never, referred to nowadays by Israeli officials, who quickly add, however, that her son and daughter and grandchildren are a source of great joy to the matronly prime minister.

"Her husband was a pleasant, rather ordinary sort of fellow," one Israeli official told UPI recently. "But he was not ambitious. Mrs. Meir was ambitious, and she is not ordinary." Prime minister since 1969 and a member of Parliament since 1948, Mrs. Meir has long been known as a tough political activist.

When she was foreign minister, the then prime minister David Ben Gurion reportedly told newsmen, "I have but one man in my cabinet, and her name is Golda Meir." She sponsored tough policies as foreign minister, and has taken a no-nonsense attitude as prime minister.

Golda Meir was born in 1898 in Kiev, in then Czarist Russia. She came with her family to the United States as a youngster, and was educated in the Teachers Seminary in Milwaukee, Wisc. Later she became a teacher and leading member of the Poalei Zion Labor Party there. Mrs. Meir also was a delegate to the U.S. section of the World Jewish Congress until 1921, when she emigrated to Palestine. There she joined the Merhavia Collective Farm Village and later became active in the Labor Federation Histadruth. She was in charge of contracting and public works enterprise from 1924 to 1926. Her rise in influence and power increased. In 1928 Mrs. Meir was appointed secretary of the Women's Labor Council of Histadruth, and held high office in the Federation of Labor from 1929 until 1946. She also became chairman of the board of directors of the Workers Sick Fund in 1929.

A pivotal position, however, was her appointment as head of the political department of the Federation of Labor. She became a labor party delegate to the World Zionist Organization in 1936, a member of the War Economics Advisory Council of the Palestine government, and a leading member in the Hagana struggle. After serving as head of the political Department of the Jewish Agency for Palestine in Jerusalem from 1946-48, she served as Israeli minister to the Soviet Union from August, 1948 to April, 1949. After her Soviet assignment she became minister of labor and social insurance in the cabinet and general secretary of the Israeli Labor party in 1966.

Sirimavo Bandaranaike, the world's first woman prime minister, is also the least well known internationally.

A shy, plump, matronly woman whose major interests centers on her family, Mrs. Bandaranaike succeeded her husband, the late Solomon West Ridgeway Dias Bandaranaike, as prime minister following his assassination in 1959.

A Strong Leader
Although she delegated much authority to her nephew, Felix Bandaranaike, during her first term of office, Mrs. Bandaranaike has since earned a reputation for outspoken political views and swift, decisive action when she deems it necessary.

Although she lost the premiership to Dudley Senanayake in a close election in 1963, she was returned to office in general elections in 1970 on a revolutionary platform.

When young dissidents felt Mrs. Bandaranaike was following a revolutionary foreign policy—she granted diplomatic recognition to the Viet Cong, North Vietnam, North Korea and East Germany within a fortnight of her election—but had failed to adopt a promised revolutionary domestic program, they set off nationwide riots.

Mrs. Bandaranaike quickly made it clear she would not tolerate revolutionary activities against her own regime. She declared an emergency and ordered the armed forces to restore law and order. Accusing North Korea of fomenting the riots, she broke relations with Pyongyang.

Appealing to the dissidents as her children, she went on national radio and urged them to stop their activities, behave themselves and return to the national family.

Sirimavo Bandaranaike was born April 17, 1916. Her father, Barnes Ratwatte, was a member of the Ceylonese senate. Educated at the Ratnapura Ferguson School and the St. Bridget's Convent in Colombo, she married Bandaranaike, a young political activist, in 1940.

A Phoenix-like Re-election

She devoted her entire time to raising her children and supporting her husband in his political career. Following his assassination in 1959, she became president of the Sri Lanka Freedom party and succeeded him as prime minister in 1960. She also retained the portfolios of foreign minister and minister for information and at different times until she was defeated in the 1965 general election. Her government had fallen shortly after her decision to include communists in her cabinet, particularly in the finance ministry. Mrs. Bandaranaike succeeded Senanayake as prime minister following general elections in 1970.

Women's Lib Birthday on 29th?

If women's liberation needs a birthday, how about February 29?

Some of the more militant female freedom fighters may complain this would be an unfair anniversary because it comes only once every four years.

But it already has been more or less a legal women's rights birthday for 684 years, and not only February 29, but the whole fourth year that goes along with it.

Enlightened women's rights may have been slow in coming through the years. However, every since 1288 women have been assured one right: on every fourth year—leap year—unmarried girls can pick out their own husbands from the menfolk available.

"Leap Year"

In that year, the National Geographic Society says, the Scottish Parliament laid down the law as follows:

"It is statut and ordiant that for ilk yeare known as lepe yeare, ilk maiden ladie, of baith high and lowe estait, shall hae libertie to bespeke ye man she likes."

The same sort of law was passed in France a few years later, and just before Columbus sailed for America, the Italian cities of Genoa and Florence added it to their books.

By 1600, English common law also decreed that "As oft as lepe yeare doth return ye ladies have ye privileg of making love to ye men, which they doe either by wordes or by looks, as to them seemeth proper."

However they popped the question, the ladies were at least assured they would be taken seriously by the objects of their affection.

The Scottish law warned: "Gif he refuses to tak her to bee his wyf, he shall bee mult in the sum of ane hundredty pundis . . ." He could escape being mult only gif he were already married.

In old England, instead of being penalized ane hundredty pundis, a determined bachelor could strike a blow for men's liberation with the present of a silk gown. But any mayden layde of high estait who accepted payment this way first had to "show her red petticoats."

No one knows for sure who first suggested leap year as hunting season on bachelors. Some fables give credit to St. Patrick in the early 5th century when reportedly at least one admiring Irish colleen was awarded a silk gown.

Women apparently laid no special claim to leap year when Julius Caesar invented it about 45 B.C. in an attempt to straighten out the calendar and keep it in line with the seasons.

Caesar divided the year into 12 months totaling 365 days. However, the Earth takes about one-fourth of a day longer to orbit the sun. Caesar found a place for the accumulating extra time by adding one day to every fourth year, which in those days ended with February.

Records aren't clear on any possible increase in marriages during leap year. But some city hall statisticians note a preference for weddings on February 29, a date at least theoretically guaranteed to liberate husbands from buying anniversary presents three years out of four.

After a Fashion

Ballerina's Fashions Designed by Husband

By MARIAN CHIRSTY

NEW YORK. — When famed Italian ballerina Carla Fracchi was recently in London to perform "Giselle" at the Festival Hall, she awoke that important Saturday with a bad case of swollen feet.

Tears flowed, followed by the logical-but-repetitious suggestion that, boo-hoo: "I cannot, cannot, cannot perform tonight."

Amid the understandable hysteria, Carla's older and wiser husband — handsome Beppe Menegatti, La Scala's producer-director — hustled his weeping star into a taxi and told the startled driver to deliver them at the doorstep of the best podiatrist in town.

The cabbie understood perfectly. The crucial night, after much reassuring affection and a shot of medicine to relieve the puffy feet, Carla performed well.

Today, in her mid-30s, and with nine "happy and supportive" years of marriage behind her, Carla says of 41-year-old Beppe: "I really can do nothing without him. He is everything."

The eloquence of the romance becomes more realistic during a minor word shuffle when Beppe claims he is underpaid, that Carla is the "star" and, therefore, the major breadwinner. She takes offense.

"Why do you say I make the big money?" retorts slightly stormy Carla. "The ballet has not made me rich." Carla, a well-known clotheshorse, retreats into premeditated silence which is fine. She's putting on make-up in preparation for a fashion-oriented photographic session for a women's magazine and silence is golden.

Beppe, who openly boasts about his many splendid "amours" with Italian actresses before marrying Carla, says: "The truth is I am third in Carla's affections. First comes dance. It has always been dance first. Then it is Francisco, our two-year-old son. I am at the end of the line — and loving her so much."

The heartfelt words, delivered with saccharine preciseness, immediately draws pouty Carla back into the arena of conversation.

Beppe Menegatti, who cut his professional teeth with Vittorio De Sica, knows Sophia Loren and Gina Lollobrigida well and is immensely adept at handling complex female psyches — to say nothing of the accompanying problems.

Recently Carla was performing at the Brooklyn Academy of Music and the inexperienced wardrobe lady erroneously sent her nice stiff tutu to the laundry. It came back limp as a dish rag — and just a few hours before the performance.

Carla wept a river. More sensible Beppe asked a cooperative sewing-minded ballerina from the chorus to help him make a new tutu for Carla from somebody else's discarded costume. They did Beppe says smugly: "Without me, Carla would have a nervous breakdown."

Beppe is the kind of overly concerned European husband who is so engrossed in his wife's image that he even designs her clothes.

Being Italian and, therefore, an incurable romantic, Beppe is addicted to organdy — even under sables and minks — and sketches dresses that are then created by Madame Felisari of Milan. "Organdy is always so fresh and innocent looking," says Beppe who, like any true Roman, takes the business of fashion very seriously.

The Beppe-Carla engagement spanned seven years. Toward the end of the seventh year, her parents were delivering ultimatums. Carla says: "The engagement did become very boring."

They met at the La Scala School. Carla was 17 and seductively prancing around the studio in a red leotard. Beppe, who admits to having had a torrid romance with another ballerina, had come to the school with his boss, De Sica, to pick a chorus line for a movie. "I was very good looking then," says a aristocratic Beppe who dresses a la Gucci. "and I was a very big success with the girls. Actually, I was a very arrogant young man."

A few years later, after Beppe had exhausted a series of romances and a more serious-minded Carla had elevated herself to prima ballerina, he telephoned Carla on a whim. Would she like to go to the theatre that night? The years melted. It was as if it were the day following that initial La Scala meeting.

Carla, then 23, replied in the best of Italian female tradition: "Wait a moment, please. Beppe. I must seek permission from my parents."

The Fracchis liked the Carla-Beppe alliance but, as the years slipped, so did their patience. Pressure was exerted. Finally the marriage took place in Cremona, 100 miles from Milan, with a glowing Madame Felisari making the now-predictable white organdy wedding gown.

Today the couple live in the same posh Milan apartment building as Rome-based designer Valentino, who has noticed Carla's white knit stockings, middle part, non-salon coiffure and the forever-organdy dresses.

"I know Valentino thinks I look like my grandmother," says Carla. "But I have made these fashion gestures mine and mine alone."

Last week Carla met New York designer Oscar de la Renta, and bought one of his flowing print organdy gowns to take back to Italy. Undoubtedly Madame Felisari will eventually do many variations on that theme because Beppe loves the dress.

Is Gina Lollobrigida a fashion plate? "She has second-class taste," says Beppe.

What about Sophia Loren and her clothes?

"What's important about Sophia is her thoughtfulness," says Beppe. "Once we were in Hamburg, Germany, making a film. Sophia arrived on the set in her Rolls Royce. The car was jammed with food gifts for the hungry crew — all Italians. She brought much pasta, eggplant, tomato, cheese, bread, wine.

"There was no food gift for me. Only a copy of the magazine Amica because there was a feature on Carla," says Beppe. Sophia never want me to forget Carla."

Hollywood Scandals

Show Business Nobody Knows

By EARL WILSON

(This is the sixth of a series of seven excerpts, reprinted from "The Show Business Nobody Knows" by Earl Wilson, by permission of Cowles Book Company, Inc., a subsidiary of Henry Regnery Co. Copyright (C) 1971 by Earl Wilson. Distributed by Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.)

Who was the number one scandal lady of the golden age of show business? Ingrid Bergman... Elizabeth Taylor... Mia Farrow? They were great beauties with tremendous potential as seductresses, but (and I don't mean to insult them) if they were the worst — or best, depending on your view-point — then scandal was in a bad way. Yet their affairs were and are the stuff of movie magazines and even, I'm sorry to say, of columns.

Liz Taylor, it is true, snatched two husbands away from their wives. Eddie Fisher from Debbie Reynolds, and Richard Burton from Sybil Burton. But since she was married to Eddie Fisher for Richard Burton, does Eddie really count? Isn't that like a fisherman throwing one fish back in because it isn't big enough.

The Burtons' scandal — Burton himself always refers to it as the scandal — was disappointingly brief and rather dull and dreary afterward, with no breath-taking side features. Burton just announced one night to Eddie Fisher, at the Fisher's villa outside Rome, "I'm in love with your wife — Get out!" and Eddie Fisher scrambled, leaving Richard and Elizabeth to their lovemaking in what he had thought, until then, was his house.

One cannot be surprised that Eddie Fisher was a shaken man ever after, always doing strange things, which led to his professional decline and ultimate bankruptcy. The real explanation may be that Eddie Fisher never got over his love for Elizabeth Taylor and her rejection of him after she tumbled for the great Shakespearean actor Richard Burton.

Although the Liz Taylor, Ingrid Bergman, and Mia Farrow cases fit loosely into the "hushed up Hollywood scandal" slots, none happened in Hollywood, and none was really hushed up. Liz Taylor, married five times, stole Eddie Fisher away from darling Debbie Reynolds and burgled Richard Burton from Sybil in her starring role as his Cleopatra in Italy, feeding him rich pasta and powerful vino every night while she worked her personal magic on him. None of it was hushed up because Liz has never been secretive, and what Elizabeth wanted Elizabeth usually got.

When I first began to circulate in this world of glamour and glitter, Liz was not yet cast as a scarlet woman. She was just becoming a genuine star at the age of twelve in National Velvet. Still, when, in 1950, Liz married Nicky Hilton, the hotel chain heir, somebody with great foresight said, "He'll make a fine first husband."

The gossip began at once. It was not about Liz, however. Nicky, the eldest son of Conrad Hilton, was drinking and gambling on the honeymoon, not paying attention to his honeymoon duties. Liz was brooding. Soon there was a report that the bride and bridegroom had split up.

I received a telephone call from Los Angeles from Arthur Forestal, a veteran publicist for Conrad Hilton, Sr., who asked me for a favor. He wanted me to publish a story the effect that the rumors about Liz and Nicky severing their relationship were not true.

"To prove it to you," he said, "I would like you to have dinner with the two of them tomorrow night at the Waldorf. They will tell it to you themselves."

They were to arrive in New York from California, he said. I agreed. It sounded like a good story.

The next day he phoned me again. Our dinner date was cancelled. They were not coming to New York together after all. The split was on.

Liz Taylor once said, "I guess the world thinks of me as such a scarlet woman. I'm almost purple."

Liz almost died on the operating table in London during a tracheotomy. The seriousness of her illness was known to show people. In the Poodle Room at the Hotel Fontainebleu in Miami Beach, Joe E. Lewis raised his glass to friends and said, "Instead of saying 'Cheers' or 'It is now past time,' let's say a little prayer for Liz Taylor."

So critical was the surgery that Liz was said to have been dead — and to have been brought back to life. These dramatic reports, true or not suddenly made the one-time scarlet woman a heroine, a figure of sympathy.

"They saved her life," Eddie stated. "Elizabeth is overwhelmed by the letters and cables from people saying they went to churches and synagogues to pray for her recovery."

As Eddie was preparing to bring Liz back to America, he talked to me in the famous Oliver Messel suite at the Dorchester. Liz's two miniature Yorkshire terriers were romping around the suite.

"She won't need any nurse going home; I'll be her nurse," Eddie said.

Elizabeth required a wheel chair and turtle-neck type collars, as well as new necklaces — "diamond and ruby bandaid" — to cover her scars. Liz, of course, walked off with the Oscar for Butterfield 8 a few weeks later (and said some years later that she didn't deserve it).

The public was in love with Liz again. But it only took a year for her to become the "other woman" again. While Liz was in Rome filming Cleopatra, she was rushed off to a hospital again, this time reportedly after taking an overdose of sleeping pills.

The gossip about Liz and her co-star Richard Burton was just starting. The studio people from Twentieth Century-Fox, sitting over their drinks in the Snakepit, the downstairs bar at the Hotel Excelsior in Rome, said Liz had taken the pills because Burton couldn't marry her. He was already married to Sybil, a rather possessive woman, who was back in London.

Writing about this later, a former secretary of Burton claimed that Liz had reached a point of desperation. She had told Burton, "I can't live without you," and Burton, drinking and desperate himself over his own situation, had said, "Then die... die... die." Incidentally, most of his acquaintances find this picture of Burton hard to accept.

Course on Sewing

Gordon Pinkosz, manager of the Singer Sewing Center at 324 Wall St., announces a new Singer sewing course available in Kingston.

Entitled "How to Sew Fashion Knits," the course meets the growing demand for techniques of sewing knits and stretch fabrics and offers several innovations: each student makes a two-piece knit outfit in class; sewing teacher demonstrates how to use any type of sewing machine to best sew on knits and stretch fabrics; a follow-up advanced course on sewing knits, a sequel to the present course, is planned later in the year.

The new knit course offers quick and easy methods and is taught during the day or evening in three 3-hour lessons by Miss Susan Schoonmaker, Singer sewing teacher, who has just returned from an in-depth knit seminar. Each student in the course receives her own 119-page book on how to sew fashion knits. The classes will be limited to eight students.

The advanced knit course will include many techniques, such as neckline variations, zippers and trims. Students will learn to make a more advanced knit outfit. This course will also consist of three 3-hour lessons. Applicants will be accepted in order of registration.

Non-Profit Plan Insurance for Legal Services Proposed

Presidents of every bar association in New York State have a proposed plan on their desks—it is a way for middle income wage earners to afford the high cost of necessary legal services to protect their basic rights and privileges. The report was forwarded to them by Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz with the request they give the plan due consideration and make constructive recommendations.

In brief, Lefkowitz has proposed a pre-paid benefit plan to be established through a non-profit corporation or by insurance companies to take up the costly bill of legal services.

William M. Gruner, new president of the Ulster County Bar Association, did not have the report when contacted by The Freeman on Wednesday. He felt it might have been sent to the former president. As soon as he did receive it, he said it would be turned over to a committee for consideration. Mr. Gruner stated he would contact The Freeman as soon as the committee's recommendations are submitted to him.

"It is a sad and ironic fact of our society today that large segments of the middle income class cannot afford necessary legal services to protect their basic rights and privileges," Lefkowitz says.

"While the affluent have no difficulty in meeting legal expenses and the indigent in our society are now able through efforts of legal aid and publicly funded legal services to obtain free legal representation, the average moderate wage earner, earning between $6,000 and $15,000 a year, too often finds himself in a position where his income exceeds maximum levels which would entitle him to free legal aid but is insufficient for him to retain private counsel to represent him," the Attorney General's report states.

Lefkowitz said that "society must concern itself with the problem as to what may be done to assure that every individual who needs an attorney can be able to obtain one.

"If moderate or middle income individuals are not to be denied their constitutional right to the use of courts or legal assistance, society must face up to this problem and find a way effectively to respond to it," he said.

The report summarizes information received at a public hearing which the Attorney General conducted last fall and also sets forth information obtained through research and studies as to how the problem is being met in other states, by Bar Associations and by labor unions.

The report continues: "In the case of labor union programs, it has been established that a pre-paid legal services plan is feasible when dealing with one particular union. However, a plan which is based upon membership in a union as a prerequisite for eligibility will not solve the problem for a great number of individuals, and, moreover, may be considered a denial of rights to those who are excluded."

"While I am not trying to discourage the formation of group legal services by individual unions on behalf of their own members, I conclude that some variation of the plan calling for voluntary participation of all individuals is the most acceptable solution. The pre-paid benefit plan which could be set up by means of a non-profit corporation or by insurance companies will allow the greatest number to participate in the simplest and the least costly way.

"The establishment of a non-profit plan is under study by the New York County Lawyer's Bar Association but its exact geographical limits have not been determined. Until it can be determined whether a statewide plan is feasible, each county bar association should give immediate consideration to the desirability of establishing a pre-paid legal service plan for its county, which would reduce the cost of legal services to all subscribers.

"It would also be desirable for county bar associations to establish a clearing house which would keep track of the growth and development of legal service plans in other parts of the nation so that they may benefit from their experience.

"The development of any legal service plan should be undertaken in consultation within the respective Appellate Division of the Supreme Court."

After the Hospital — The Poorhouse?

For too many consumers, a stay in the hospital is often followed by a trip to the poorhouse. At least that's what one New York banking institution reports.

During the 60's, the February issue of the bank's "Consumer Views" newsletter says, health care costs rose faster than any other consumer outlay. Alert families should ask themselves if they're still prepared for the financial risks of illness and accident.

"A good program of health insurance needs study and planning," the consumer newsletter points out, "and calls for a review of your protection every year or two" to insure that fast-rising medical costs haven't outstripped coverage.

Begin by listing all policies, whether they're on an individual basis or part of a group plan, the bank advises. Read the group certificates and individual policies carefully.

There are five kinds of plans, Citibank points out, and it's wise to know the differences between them. Basic hospitalization such as Blue Cross commonly pays all or almost all hospital charges for a semi-private room for a certain number of additional days, plus half the cost for a number of additional days.

Other basic medical expenses such as surgery, diagnostic X-rays and laboratory tests are covered by plans like Blue Shield, but actual coverage of these other basic expenses varies widely with different policies.

Whatever policies a family has, these vital points should be studied:

1. Which members of your family are covered?
2. Does the insurance apply outside your community?
3. Are enough hospital days covered? Although the average hospital stay is about eight days, a basic program should pay in full or nearly in full — for at least 21 days of hospitalization.
4. When do benefits start? Maternity, for example, is often not covered until 10 months or a year have passed.
5. What are the benefit levels? Are they up to date? A 10-year-old hospitalization policy may give you only $20 a day for a hospital room. Today, hospital rooms may cost $100 a day, in most cases more.

6. Is the policy renewable and convertible? A good individual contract doesn't give the insurer the right to cancel or raise your rates because you've had a lot of hospital or medical care and is guaranteed renewable until at least age 65.
7. What are the limitations and exclusions? These should include only the standard ones, such as industrial accidents covered by workmen's compensation, cosmetic surgery, self-inflicted conditions, etc.
8. Is the deductible right for your budget?
9. Are you getting the most for your premium dollar?

Group plans are almost always less expensive, provide more total benefits and accept higher claims than individual policies, the bank letter reports.

A young couple, for example, can expect maternity expenses and there could be serious childhood diseases. "Such a family should concentrate on getting basic hospitalization, maternity and surgery protection if it can't afford comprehensive coverage," the bank cautions.

Don't oversure. "If you have a good group plan, an additional policy may oversure you."

"When comparison shopping, choose the plan that covers most services you may need and look for the insurance with the largest percentage payments (at least 75 or 80 percent) rather than the highest maximums which you are not likely to need."

Before You Buy: Women Star in Banking Affairs

A Weekly Information Service for Consumers
By MARGARET DANA

If you aren't making some of your money make more money for you every day, you're missing a good bet. There are of course all sorts of ways to put your money to work, some needing quite a lot of money to start with, some being complicated, and some not entirely safe. But one of the simplest, easiest and safest ways is by starting a savings account in a savings institution and depositing a regular amount weekly or monthly. You can start with a tiny amount — $5 a month for example, or it can be $5 a week, or as much as your budget allows.

There are various kinds of savings institutions, all of them good and useful. But today I want to give you some facts about savings and loan associations because of the increasingly large role women play in both operating the associations and in putting money into savings accounts.

Women have a knack for making "small beginnings" turn into large results (perhaps that's why knitting is a favorite recreation for them), and small savings end up as family security.

A savings and loan association is a privately owned and managed organization designed primarily to do two things. First, they keep your savings safe while paying you interest, usually five per cent compounded quarterly. Secondly, they put your money to work by lending it to people in your community.

They provide mortgage money for single homes, mobile homes, apartment houses, churches, shopping centers, recreation parks and other things which add to a community's progress and life.

This phase of savings and loan associations' services surprises many women. One said to me recently she felt a little guilty at putting money into her savings account when she kept hearing that consumers need to spend more of their money in order to get our economy moving again.

Actually, the money you put in your savings account does as much for the economy as money spent for consumer products and service. Your money in a savings account does not just sit in some big vault but goes to work at once, building your community and making money for you and your family. This is true of all savings, whether through commercial banks, mutual savings banks, or credit unions.

A passbook account in your savings and loan association not only permits you to withdraw your savings quickly in case of a special need, but lets you build your savings to suit your own family convenience. And your savings are insured up to $15,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Savings and loan associations may be licensed either by the state or by the Federal government. In the latter case, the word "Federal" becomes part of the association's name.

Women are especially good as home managers in finding ways of cutting a little here and a little there so that each week an amount of money can go into that savings account. Children soon catch on to this, too, and it becomes a game which later translates into a good habit — and good money management.

Save $5 a week, and in a year you have $266.55; in five years, $1475.62; ten years, $3367.42. Not bad for extra security.

Savings is increasingly becoming a woman's game. A friend of mine, Miss Marie Welsh, one of two women who serve as presidents of savings and loan associations in Pennsylvania, gives some reasons why women belong on both sides of the savings and loan deal:

"Women have played a dynamic role in the growth of our associations," she says, "perhaps because they provide a general warmth, friendliness, and genuine interest in other people, their problems, and their money management. This lifts the saving or lending of money out of the bare routines of a business transaction and makes it a 'people to people' kind of thing. Here at Doylestown Federal Savings and Loan Association we try to take the strangeness and complexity out of things like applying for a mortgage. All of us, both men and women on the staff, work together to make this association reach out into our community to help."

In other states the same thing is happening. The U.S. Savings and Loan League tells me their membership in 33 states includes at least one top woman manager in each state with some woman presidents. In Illinois, for example, 34 of their savings and loan institutions have women and managing officers.

For facts about your own local associations and their services, shop around and ask them to tell you their stories.

Consumer's Question Box

By MARGARET DANA

Q. I would like to know what is meant by the term "modified starch" which appears on many food labels. Can it be harmful?

A. Modified starches are made from the familiar food starches contained in corn, wheat, sorghum, rice and potato. They are all excellent sources of nutritive carbohydrate and provide useful and inexpensive portions of energy (calorie) value. They are used as food thickeners, gelling agents, etc.

They are "modified" or "changed" by processes which alter their molecules enough so they can hold the ingredients together in foods like cream-style corn, cream sauces, fruit-pie fillings, and icings.

Modified starch keeps confectioners' sugar from lumping, and in sterilizing canned foods the use of modified starches keeps the foods looking nice in spite of the intense heat.

Q. Just why do we have to pay tax on juices like the "juice-drink" label enclosed, when food is not a taxable item? Just because these are labeled "drink" instead of "juice" the consumer is forced to pay a tax.

A. It is true that food is not subject to the sales tax — but a drink which is not 100 per cent true fruit juice is not technically and nutritionally considered a food.

Soft drinks like the colas and gingerale also are considered non-foods. You will pay no tax on 100 per cent grapefruit juice, but you will on part grapefruit, or grapefruit-flavored drink, which is not food.

Q. I recently bought a double bed-size quilt which has a filling of 100 per cent polyester, with a covering of 100 per cent acetate. I placed this comforter over my electric blanket and turned the dial to about medium. The comforter became so hot I was alarmed. I removed it and have not used it since. Would there be a possibility of combustion? I will watch our paper for your answer.

Q. A number of my friends and I are wondering what has happened to lettuce lately. It is of poor quality and the price is sky-high. We have just about given up trying to find any decent lettuce in our markets.

A. A good part of the lettuce crop comes from Western states like California, Arizona, etc. The Western Growers Association reports what has happened: First, heavy rains during the planting season in Arizona cut down the crop badly there during the November-December harvest season. Then in the Imperial Valley a long spell of cold weather slowed growth and shortened the harvest time. The thermometer there has gone as low as 18 degrees, and, say the growers, they can't start harvesting until noon each day. That cut down the amount that could be harvested, and the lettuce was often damaged from frost.

Small harvest meant high prices. But the worst is over and by the end of February warmer weather will bring consumers better lettuce and lower prices.

Q. Is imitation milk acceptable in place of real milk?

A. Imitation milk comes in a variety of types — made different ways and from different ingredients. For those who have an allergy to true milk products, imitation milk can be useful.

In an analysis of one such imitation milk, Dr. Sam Coulter, head of the Food Science and Industries Dept. at the University of Minnesota, found that the imitation has less than one-fourth as much protein as milk, and contains no vitamin A or riboflavin. It has about one-sixth of the calcium of real milk.

Dry powdered skim or whole milk is much less expensive than fresh milk and will still give you almost all that real milk gives. Mixing a little fresh milk with it makes it taste normal to children. It would probably be a better food for growing children than imitation milk if there is no allergy present.

Sympathetic Reader
(Note: We recently ran a letter from N. M. who has three very small children and is 40 years old. She wrote she felt "ancient" in the company of the other mothers who were much younger than herself. This letter, directed to N.M., comes from a sympathetic reader.)

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I very well understand the problems of being an older mother. I was 39 when my son was born and 44 when he started kindergarten. Now he's 26 and I'm 65. Also, since I taught kindergarten for 12 years and have been the director of a nursery school for the past 22, I've made the acquaintance of many mature mothers like N.M. I've always found them very likeable and more dependable too. I think N.M.'s biggest problem is her attitude. She must stop thinking negatively and feeling insecure or ancient. Just tell her to be herself and not to feel that she must dress young or talk the younger mother's language. If she has a smile and enters into the conversation of the younger mothers, she will be readily admired and accepted regardless of her age. Her personality will be her biggest asset. She can also overcome her inferiority complex by participating more in her children's activities. She should get out and make herself useful by becoming an active volunteer. For example, she could take part in the children's library or be a teacher's helper in school. Although N.M. does have a problem, please tell her how easy it is to have it corrected. M.C.

Have you a problem as a mature woman, or with one? For advice write Margaret Brookfield, Information Center on the Mature Woman, 3 West 57th Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Generation Gap — Not So

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

before inventing neuroses for the rest of us, in order to satisfy their own preconceived misconceptions of the generation gap. No need for anonymity here.

Cordially,
MARK EVANS, Ph.D.

DEAR MARK: You seem unbelievably well-adjusted. Now, where are any Freudians out there (frustrated or otherwise) who suspect that you have a problem, I hope they will write in and tell us both what it is.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you 10 years ago for advice on what to do about a man I had been going with for 20 years. I was married and so was he, but we carried on a real love affair all that time.

Well, he solved my problem for me when his wife left him. He got a divorce and took up with a young girl he hardly knew, and he married her.

I thought I would die when he dropped me for her, but now I realize that he did me the greatest favor in the world.

I can now appreciate what a jewel my husband is. He is ready to retire, and I pray God will give me many years to make up to him for all the heartache I put him through. Please tell women that it doesn't pay to be the other woman. I learned the hard way. Thank you.

WINSTON SALEM
DEAR W.S.: That's what I've been saying for 15 years. But if I had told you that 10 years ago, would you have listened?

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for two years to a man who has a habit of doing something which infuriates me. If he loses his temper, he will kick me or slap me. It is always for something petty like if he wants me to stop talking or do something faster.

I have told him how much this upsets me, and he keeps promising he won't ever do it again, but the next time he loses his temper, he forgets his promise.

To teach him a lesson, I have considered refusing to get up at 5:30 the next morning to fix him a big breakfast. Do you think it would do any good? I just hate to be kicked and slapped.

L. IN FLUSHING
DEAR L.: Try it, and if he forgets again, try "forgetting" to get up to fix him a big breakfast for a month.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for all Occasions."

You Can Tap Maple Syrup in Your Own Back Yard

An article on tapping maple trees for syrup was published in the women's section of The Daily Freeman on February 3. It received a tremendous response — so much so we are repeating the information. It seems that all over the northeastern United States and Canada there are maple trees that can easily be tapped to make up to a gallon of 100 per cent pure maple syrup per tree. Yet many homemakers go on paying $10-$15 per gallon, even though this delicious food is free — literally — right in their own back yards. Maple syrup is made simply by boiling the sap of the maple tree — sugar, black, red or silver maple. This boiling causes the water to evaporate off, leaving pure maple syrup. If the sap is boiled longer, the result is maple sugar. Nothing is ever added. Maple syrup and maple sugar are the natural, organic products of the maple tree. Furthermore, it can be absolutely safe to tap a maple tree for year after year for syrup. A proper tap will cause no injury whatsoever. There are maple groves that have continued to grow and flourish after being tapped every year for over a century.

The small amount of sugar taken is usually less than 10 per cent of the tree's annual production, and the trees heal themselves automatically. The hole doesn't even have to be plugged. The best months for sap runs are February, March, and April, when the nights are very cold, but the days are getting warmer. A rule of thumb is the very best sap weather is a 20-degree night followed by a 45-degree mid-day. One of the newest items on the market is a "Sugaring-Off Kit" with which the do-it-yourselfer can safely and easily tap his own maple trees and make syrup or maple sugar. Included are 5 professional sap spouts with bucket hooks, a cloth syrup filter, and complete, easy-to-follow instructions for every step of the operation from tree recognition to making and bottling the finished product. The booklet also contains over a dozen proven country maple recipes, and as an extra bonus, the kit comes with 16 charmingly designed maple syrup jar labels for the amateur producer to personalize with his own name for unique gift giving. The only additional items needed are to be found in any household: buckets (wood, metal, or plastic), a light hammer, an ordinary wood drill with a seven-sixteenth-inch bit, a big pot for boiling the sap, and an ordinary kitchen colander. To get the authentic "Sugaring-Off kit," sent $5.50 plus 45 cents postage to: Maple Syrup Kit, in care of The Daily Freeman, 3 Broadway, Kingston, N.Y. 12401.

STUFFED WHITEFISH — Garnished with whole pitted dates, spiced fruits and slices of oranges and lemons.

Stuffed Whitefish a L'Orange adds an elegant touch to company buffets or dinners.

Special Treat for Lenten Season

Fishing for a special new way to serve traditional Lenten fish fare?

Cast your line no further: the home economists at the Bordo Products Company, importers of fine pitted and diced dates, have formulated a fish recipe fit for King Neptune himself.

It's Stuffed Whitefish a L'Orange, a main course "catch" that's elegant enough to serve guests, and mouth-watering enough to please your family any date of the year. Made with whole, fresh fish, this entree's fluffy brown rice stuffing is deliciously accented with the rich flavor of Bordo imported dates and the citrus tang of orange and lemon juices.

Baked Stuffed Whitefish

Stuffing
One cup orange juice
Juice of a large lemon (approximately 3 T.)
Five tablespoons butter (used 1T-2T-2T portions)
One cup brown rice
Two tablespoons brown sugar
One-half teaspoon coriander
One-half pound scallops (fresh or canned)
One eight oz. package Bordo imported diced dates or Bordo whole dates, cut up.

Fish
Two whole whitefish, about 2 pounds each Salt

Basting Liquid
Juice of one orange (approximately one-quarter cup)
Two tablespoons brown sugar
Four tablespoons melted butter

To prepare stuffing, combine orange juice, lemon juice and one tablespoon of butter in a large saucepan. Add brown rice and bring mixture to a boil over medium heat, stirring once. Lower heat to simmer, cover and cook for 40-50 minutes, or until liquid is absorbed. Remove from heat and fluff with a fork.

Then add brown sugar, coriander and 2 tablespoons of butter to cooked rice. Mix gently with a fork until the butter and sugar are melted. Saute scallops in 2 tablespoons of butter for 3 to 4 minutes. Dice the scallops, discarding the liquid. Add Bordo imported dates and the diced scallops to the rice, and mix gently with a fork. Salt the insides of the fish and brush them lightly with melted butter. Divide stuffing in half and place one half in the cavity of each fish. Skewer fish together securely or sew them closed. Place stuffed fish on a well greased baking pan.

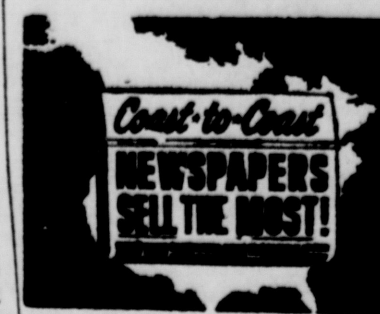

To prepare basting liquid, mix orange juice and brown sugar. Baste fish alternately with melted butter and orange juice mixture. Repeat basting procedure every 10 to 15 minutes while fish bakes.

Bake at 375 degrees for 40 to 50 minutes, or until fish flakes. Serves eight to ten people; the recipe can be divided in half to serve four or five.

Tired of serving the same old meat dishes...beef, pork and chicken? Then it's time to treat your family to something new. How long has it been since you've served veal? Perhaps you've never tried this delicately flavored meat. It's a favorite in many European countries and this particular recipe has that continental flair. Veal and Mushrooms with Country Gravy is a simple entree, but the flavor is superb.

Browning the veal steaks is a matter of minutes; then spoon mushrooms that have been lightly sauteed in butter over the meat and top with a old-fashioned gravy that's made creamy with milk. For a colorful and flavorful accompaniment serve tangy Red Cabbage. Tart red apples are cooked along with the shredded red cabbage in butter and lemon juice and caraway seed is added for extra spice. Your family is sure to enjoy this satisfying meal with veal.

Veal and Mushrooms

Three-fourths teaspoon salt
One-fourth teaspoon leaf thyme

One-half pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
One-half pound fresh mushrooms, sliced

Combine flour, salt, thyme and pepper; coat meat with mixture; reserve flour mixture. In a large skillet melt one-fourth cup butter; brown meat slowly, about 10 minutes for each side. Remove meat from skillet to warm platter and keep warm. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in skillet; add mushrooms and saute 3 minutes. Spoon over meat. Stir 1 tablespoon flour mixture into drippings. Remove from heat; gradually stir in milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Cook 2 additional minutes. Season to taste. Pour over meat and mushrooms. Makes 6 servings.

Red Cabbage

MIND YOUR SHOPPING MANNERS!

Dear Folks:

Over the years I have received so many, many letters from all parts of the country complaining about the irritating "little things" that unthinking people do in grocery stores — things that make shopping a real nightmare! And I gather from your strong words on the subject, that it is a universal complaint. It seems that no matter what part of the country the complaints come from, they are all alike. So I'm going to let you in on a few of the typical complaints, and hope that none of you is guilty of these grocery shopping no-nos. First of all, there is the very social-minded grocery shopper who uses the grocery store to visit with her friends and neighbors — this means their carts are parked side by side blocking the aisle while they catch up on the latest news. And you stand on first one foot and then the other hoping against hope they will finally notice you and let you by.

Then there are the "pinchers" — no fruit or vegetable is safe when they are on the loose. You can almost hear the avocados and peaches yell "ouch!"

Or have you ever been hit from behind by a speeding grocery cart as Junior races the cart up and down the aisles? Mom is in fast pursuit screeching at the top of her lungs — which tends to unnerve even the most composed shoppers.

And we must not forget the "thinker" — her cart is parked right in front of the very item you want and there is no way to reach around her — she must be, she's just got to be, planning her entire week's menu right there in front of the canned beans.

Don't forget, too, the gal who has forgotten an item — leaves the grocery cart parked in midaisle, and wanders all over the store.

And I would really be remiss if I didn't mention the shopper with two carts loaded to the brim (sideboards would be helpful), and where does she end up but in the express line where the sign plainly says in 10-inch block letters, "No More Than Six Items Checked Out in This Line." There is a line a mile long backed up behind her so what can the poor checker do but check her out?

The most unforgivable shopper of them all is the "faster" who opens jars and bottles of this and that — and actually tastes the contents — then puts it back on the shelf. But the meat shoppers — now they are the real prize winners. They push the cart back and forth in front of the meat counter, from the hamburger to the steak, from the steak back to the hamburger — and this goes on and on and on, and they always end up buying the hamburger. (Don't we all?) They just can't seem to realize that the price on that top sirloin isn't going to change no matter how long you stand and stare at it!

Finally, you've reached the checkout counter. You're carts of groceries — she stands there until the checker has totaled the amount and then, and only then, does she start to dig in that oversized, overnight bag of a pocketbook for her checkbook. After emptying everything on the counter, she finally finds it, but then doesn't have a pen, and, last but not least, starts all over with a frantic search for her driver's license...

Greenland a Fascinating Place

NEW YORK Greenland. Many places can actually only be reached by dog-sleigh or helicopter, even during the summer. Most of the fjords are frozen nine months a year except the Discobay, accessible five months a year.

But that, of course, is what makes this island one of the most fascinating places in the world to visit. With its unspoiled greatness and its unique scenery it is well worth all the efforts.

It is actually still rather complicated to move around on fundamental permission is needed to go there (except for some military bases that are out of bounds), you should make detailed preparations before going there as there are extremely few tourist accommodations available. In most cases tourists will have to sleep in dormitories or in modest private rooms except for the two new comfortable hotels in Godthaab and Jacobshavn as well as the older ones in Sondre Stramfjord and Narssarsuaq. Advance reservations are therefore necessary. If you plan to travel on your own, it is suggested you write directly to the Ministry for Greenland, Hausergade 3, Copenhagen K, regarding local transportation and accommodations.

One of the world's most awesome sights—the breaking off of icebergs into the sea—is now available for adventure-seekers this summer through a selection of package tours that include charter flights from Copenhagen and ship cruises along Greenland's dramatic west coast.

From June through August, SAS charters will regularly depart the Danish capital taking tourists to western coastal Greenland cities such as Jacobshavn, Godthaab and Narssarsuaq, where they will board coastal steamers to watch the gigantic icebergs which have broken off the glaciers.

As one sails along the west coast, Greenland's inland ice cap rises behind the coastal mountains like a giant white back, barren and shimmering, the product of snowfalls since the dawn of time. Five-sixths of Greenland lies under a two-mile-thick ice cap with never a thaw.

This vast mass of ice makes its way through the valleys and is out as glaciers into the fjords. There the edges break off — or "calve" — up to half a mile long and over 300 feet high. These are the icebergs which topple with a deafening crash, whipping up a giant tidal wave.

Here time has stood still. Jacobshavn Fjord, packed with floating icebergs of indescribable colors in summer, suggest the beginning of the world. The ice pushes out at 60 feet a day and sails south to meet with icebergs pushed out from glaciers in the south Greenland fjords. In platoons they march south into the Atlantic and melt and vanish.

This summer, more Americans and Europeans will visit Greenland, with prices as low as $510. Others will fly from Iceland on trips from one to eight days, with prices as low as $75. In all cases, reservations ahead of time are a must.

Further information about visiting the largest island in the world is available through the Danish National Tourist Office, Scandinavia House, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10017.

Sundowner Club Cruises

Caribbean Via a Schooner

A new year-round schedule of Caribbean cruises for the luxury schooner Sundowner has been announced by her owners, Sundowner Club Cruises.

Responding to the popular demand for the air-conditioned ship's previously announced winter cruises, a series of 10 extra summer cruises has now been added. Starting in June and running through early November, the cruises all offer 11 nights on board.

Previously, Sundowner's regular season lasted from Thanksgiving through April, while her summer cruises were primarily taken up with private charters.

The extra series of regular scheduled cruises was announced by Rebecca Piech, reservations manager, because of the heavy demand for the pending winter season. Sundowner's 1971-72 winter season program got under way in November with a special Thanksgiving Regatta Cruise departing St. Lucia.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the additional cruises, Sundowner Club Cruises announced that Captain Peter Davies, a seasoned yachtsman who has circumnavigated the globe, has joined the 143-foot ship as her master. Captain Davies has made 14 transatlantic crossings and has considerable sailing experience in the Caribbean.

For the new summer schedule, Sundowner will offer two 11-nights-on-board cruises — the Windward North and the Windward South.

The Windward South departs Grenada the first Sunday of June, July, August and September, and the second Sunday of October. Each cruise brings her passengers to the island of Martinique on a Thursday.

The Windward North departs Grenada the first Sunday of June, July, August and September, and the second Sunday of October. Each cruise brings her passengers to the island of Martinique on a Thursday.

Groups of 12 minimum may charter her for any of these cruises for $4,900.

After one short season in the Eastern Caribbean, Sundowner is already a byword for luxury and comfort. She has eight air-conditioned staterooms with private lavatories and toilets. The food, featuring some authentic island dishes, is unquestionably gourmet. The boat boasts of free soda fountain, while free rum is included in the rates. Single bookings, as well as entire private charter parties are accepted. Repeat passengers receive a 10 per cent discount.

Sundowner's full schedule and rate of the 1971-72 winter season are contained in a new brochure which is available from travel agents, or from Sundowner Club Cruises, 300 East Joe Orr Road, Chicago Heights, Ill. 60411.

Youth in the News—Honors

Honors continue to highlight Youth in the News with this week's reports covering a wide geographic area.

Michael Felice Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Felice of Sunrise Park, has returned for his spring semester of study at Cornell University and has been inducted as a member of the Phi Sigma Epsilon national fraternity there.

Felice, a 1969 graduate of Kingston High School is in his junior year in the School of Electrical Engineering at Cornell. He attended Ulster County Community College where he majored in engineering science. In June 1971, he received his associate in applied science degree with distinction from UCCC and received a financial award to continue his engineering studies at Cornell.

A Dartmouth College senior from Hurler has been cited by a professor of government for outstanding academic achievement during the past term.

Charles Leroy James was cited by Professor Franklin Smallwood for course work in Government 31. In a letter from Carroll W. Brewster, dean of the college, James was told that faculty citations are sparingly given and that they become a part of each man's permanent record at Dartmouth.

Janes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy L. Janes, is a 1968 graduate of Kingston High School. Since entering Dartmouth, he has spent a term as teaching assistant in the Richmond '52-'72 project and has been a member of the baseball team.

Rhinebeck Central School has an additional Regents Scholarship winner. Paul Hessler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hessler of 40 Rhinecliff Road, Rhinebeck was awarded a scholarship through Cardinal Spellman High School, Bronx. He transferred to Rhinebeck High School in November, 1971. Area students continue to distinguish themselves with honors listings at college.

Elaine Loukas of 193 Clinton Avenue, Kingston, has received high honors rating for the first semester at Chandler School, Boston. The daughter of Mrs. Irene Loukas, she is a 1970 graduate of Kingston High School and is majoring in the legal program at the professional secretarial school.

While at KHS she was a member of the Future Business Leaders Association, Lively Arts and Debate Club.

Robert Laird, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Laird of 12 Village Drive, Saugerties, has received a distinguished rating at Purdue University. During the first semester he earned a 5.73 average on the 6.0 perfect scoring. He is a freshman at Purdue majoring in science. A 1971 graduate of Saugerties High School, he was a member of the National Honor Society. He received a Regents Scholarship and a Letter of Commendation from the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying program.

David J. Gallenz, RD 1, Box 65, Kingston has been named to the dean's list this semester at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Gallenz.

Ralph Mitchell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mitchell Sr. of 193 O'Neil Street, Kingston was named to the dean's list for the first semester of his senior year at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy.

Mitchell is an electrical engineer student.

Susan Marilyn Dillon is one of the first semester dean's list at Bryant College, Smithfield, R.I. A graduate of Kingston High School, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Dillon of 75 Sherry Lane, Kingston.

A number of Ulster County and Northern Dutchess students have been named to the dean's list at Dutchess Community College during the fall-winter semester.

Red Hook residents earning academic honors are James G. Biron, Brenda S. Damon, Ethel M. Johnduff, and Craig J. Fisher.

Highland students in high averages are Patricia Cicale, Christine A. Canino, Donna M. Loreto, Dennis W. McGraw, Michael W. Palladino, Robert Petery, Rosemary R. Rhodes and Edward M. Tesman.

Marlboro students named to the dean's list are Michael J. Dirienzo, Joanne DuBois, and Margaret K. Rhodes.

Other Ulster County residents on the DCC dean's list are Joseph C. Bagatta of Milton, Michael F. Beels, of Rifton and Lise R. Poulin of New Paltz.

CONGRATULATIONS—Three Kingston High School seniors who have qualified as finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition for 1971-72 receive congratulations of Dan H. Allen (L) principal. They are Jonathan P. Harding, Linda A. Leiching and Richard W. Ralf (R). They will compete with 14,750 other finalists for 1,000 one time National Merit $1,000 scholarships and for 2,000 renewable Merit Scholarships for use at a regionally accredited United States college of the winner's choice. Finalists who win Merit Scholarships will be announced May 15. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

White House Youth Advocate Changes

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Young people who have difficulty with routine school subjects may be cheered by the recently issued report of the White House Youth Conference which made recommendations for changes in education.

The task force points out that in the area of "ensuring equal access" in secondary schools changes are needed in curricula that has been "overly standardized to help those students who plan to enter college meet admission requirements."

Of the youth delegates on the conference committee 38.8 percent were high school students, which is their exact percentage of the country's population. Other youth delegates included authors, beauticians, laborers, state legislators, a college president, and the youngest dean of women in the United States.

It was pointed out that the primary goal of education should be self-actualization of individuals served, not preparation of individuals to fit existing slots which are determined by economic considerations.

And the report also noted that exceptional students—physically, emotionally, mentally handicapped, gifted, etc.—need to learn how to develop their individual interests and aptitudes.

Students entering junior and senior high school differ in competence, interest, learning styles, and in future prospects for work and education, the report says, so "secondary school students must be offered opportunities to design individualized educational programs suited to their particular competencies and interests with the help of sensitive, informed advisers and counselors."

In implementing individualized education a large variety of alternative systems of education and forms of presentation, materials, and so on, within these systems must be made available, in the opinion of the youth task force.

In this connection they point out that students:

Must be permitted to explore various areas of interest which induce social, emotional, spiritual, intellectual and physical development of the individual.

Must be allowed to learn outside the formal classroom and to receive academic credit for these experiences.

Need to move freely between vocational and academic programs.

It is also suggested that additional systems of education are needed to provide for both the social and technical needs of today's students. Grading and college entrance requirements also need to be reevaluated and revised.

Gymnastics Club Popular at Rondout

Twice a week 40 girls from the Rondout Valley Middle and High Schools meet after school to practice the art of gymnastics. They comprise the Rondout Valley Gymnastics Club, whose members are in Grades 6 through 12.

With co-coaches Mrs. Anne Acton and Miss Ruth Stubbins, they work on a variety of gymnastic routines, ranging from basic to the more complex.

Tryouts were held in the fall. The girls selected, besides their twice-weekly practices after school, may come in on Saturdays to work on routines. Among these are floor exercises including ballet and tumbling moves put to music, vaulting, and work on the uneven parallel bars and the balance beam.

The club will participate in meets within the next month. At present gymnastics are not included in Ulster County Athletic League sports, but both Mrs. Acton and Miss Stubbins hope that other schools will be encouraged to include this activity. The club went to West Point recently to see a gymnastics meet, accompanying the wrestling team which attended a wrestling tournament at the United States Military Academy.

Gymnastics are a unique form of physical activity, appealing to many girls who may not be interested in other, more usual sports. The routines permit the girls to show grace, poise, and femininity in athletics. People who have watched gymnasts compete in the Olympic Games know what remarkable feats of balance and grace of bodily movement can be achieved.

Rondout Valley district residents have had one opportunity already to see local young gymnasts at work when the Gymnastic Club put on an exhibition last fall. The club plans a second show on June 2.

Bangla Disk Hassle

By LEI

Hardly had the shooting stopped in Bangladesh, when, thousands of miles away, the fighting really began. The second war of Bangladesh is still raging, and represents serious questions as to whether mankind is, at this time, capable of really rising above the other animals to become the Unselfish Superape.

It all began as a good idea, but the road to hassles is paved with good intentions and there's many a slip 'twixt the idea and the disk. It would get quite tedious to attempt a blow-by-blow account of the battle, particularly since the argument continues, but for the lucky few who haven't been following it, here is a blueprint of how to make war over peace, and make madness out of music.

Early last fall, war raged in Pakistan, and millions of refugees were dying of hunger, exposure and disease, rather than from bullets. Humanitarians were horrified, and several relief measures were begun. None was more ambitious than that undertaken by some of the largest names in popular music, under the direction of George Harrison. Last August first, the "Concert For The Benefit of Bangladesh" was held in Madison Square Garden. Many of those who attended reported that it was an almost mystical or religious experience—thousands of people gathered, sharing in beautiful music for a good cause.

It was a history-making event, as Bob Dylan stood, looking somehow small and delicate beside George Harrison, singing, while Ringo Starr swung on the drums. All the time, the big recording reels were turning. If someone could have seen into the future, they would have pulled the plug on the movie cameras and the tape recorders and allowed the event to live only as a sacred memory in the minds and souls of those who were lucky enough to be there. Some things cannot be recorded. Perhaps it means misfortune to try.

When the concert was over, there were the miles of tape and film, showing, in addition to Harrison, Dylan, and Starr, Ravi Shanker, Eric Clapton, Billy Preston, Leon Russell, Klaus Voorman, Badfinger, Jesse Davis, Jim Horn, and countless other talented artists making music that was all the better because they weren't doing it for the bread—they were doing it so some dark-eyed child asleep in the mud of Bangladesh might not join the thousands who had died and been eaten by the rats. And now, thought the philanthropists, all that tape and all those films can be sold and make more money for the refugees. And that is where everything got out of tune. Perhaps the original problem can be traced to the fact that Bob Dylan was not on the Apple label. He was an Artist Contracted To Another Company. Contracts, recording rights, publicity and distribution franchises have a way of playing hay with charity, peace, and good vibes.

Columbia and Capital Records have "negotiated" for six months now over who had the right to distribute records and tapes, and where. In fact they "negotiated" so strenuously that the disks and tapes, originally scheduled for release in time for the Christmas rush, were released, instead, Dec. 20. Many dealers were scared out of even stocking the records, since the set, scheduled to retail for $12.98, sold to distributors for $10 with only 10 per cent returns allowed—and all-too-many were afraid it would never be released in time for Christmas shopping after all. (Actually, most people who are going to pay $12.98 for a gift don't wait until the last week to buy it!) When the dust settled over who was going to pay for publicity on the disks, it was too late for much publicity anyway. George Harrison, watching his beautiful idea turn cancerous before his eyes made some typically blunt statements on the Dick Cavett Show—he always was the quiet Beatle who occasionally made devastating remarks to the press—remember? His remarks touched off another round of hassles between managers, directors, and distributors. Meanwhile, back in Bangladesh, starving toddlers at mud and grass.

A television showing of highlights from the concert was scheduled for Dec. 4 by CBS-TV. Plans were scrubbed, and it was decided to release the selected films as a motion picture released by 20th-Century Fox. Release is scheduled for Easter—but the last thing to go as scheduled was the concert.

Ironically, many found the "Bangladesh" recording disappointing. While sales are over six million dollars on the record set alone, many who were at the concert find that the spirit of the occasion is missing on the tape, and they notice flaws they never heard originally. Several reviewers have had special praise for Bob Dylan's performance, but ironically, George Harrison, who started the whole thing, received disappointing notices. It is not, one is sure, his only disappointment concerning the benefit.

Why Americans own $54,000,000,000 worth of U.S. Savings Bonds.

One good reason is the Payroll Savings Plan. About three-fourths of all Bonds are purchased through the Plan. It's helping Americans save more money than they ever dreamed they could.

That's because the Payroll Savings Plan is such an easy way to save. All you do is sign up where you work and the amount you specify is set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's the easy way to build a nest egg.

The Ranchette

A Standout Anywhere

By JACK McEENEY

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Professional planning can do much to lift the one level home design from the ordinary and give it eye-catching charm. An excellent example of such treatment is offered today in a sparkling true ranch design, called "The Ranchette."

"The Ranchette" is a house that will stand out in any neighborhood because of its well balanced exterior and simple roof line. The main living area reflects open planning at its best and at the same time the sleeping area, consisting of three generous bedrooms, has been given the separation and privacy essential in any home.

aginative note in the creation of the kitchen, dining and living areas. The galley type kitchen, located at the left rear, offers efficient access to a large breezeway, basement staircase and a small lavette. The large living room, with awning type picture window and modern fireplace, opens to a dining area which has been assigned to the rear next to the kitchen. The main bath has been placed in a position that serves all areas of the house readily. The exterior walls show in-verted board and batten with natural finish and white shingle roof. The floor plan contains 1220 square feet of living space. The breezeway covers 126 square feet and the garage has 264 square feet. The basic house is 50 feet-6 inches long with an overall of 72 feet-6 inches including the breezeway and garage. Complete building blueprints are available at moderate cost by using the accompanying coupon.

Dry Wall Is Easy To Repair

By MR. FIX

Dry wall construction is not subject to the cracking and chipping of plaster but it, too, will need repair in time. Sometimes heavy objects pushed or bumped against the wall will create dents and holes.

Joints between panels open either due to improper installation or to the warping of studs or the settling of the entire wall.

Repairs are not the same as for plaster walls, but they are not difficult. Because dry wall does not have the lath backing of plaster and because it is generally thinner, repairs are not simply a matter of filling.

Dents can be filled, of course. Use spackling compound. Two types are available — ready-to-use and powder that you mix with water. The ready-mix is probably easier for home repairs. Spread on with a putty knife. Finish with a wet blade and you probably can get it so smooth it won't need sanding.

Holes need a backing before they can be filled. Use a piece of metal mesh larger than the hole. Fasten a piece of string to the mesh, bend the wire slightly so that you can get it through the hole. Fasten the string to a stick or pencil so that the mesh will not fall through.

Pull the string tight so that the mesh will flatten against the back side of the wall. Start by applying patching plaster — or, for real quick setting, plaster of paris — against the wide so that the plaster adheres to the edges of the hole and the wire mesh. Force it through the mesh so that serves as a backing.

With the first application dry and the mesh held in place, snip off the strong and continue applying patching plaster in layers. Finish with a layer of spackling compound.

Large holes should be repaired by replacing a section of the dry wall. Cut out a piece wide enough to reach from one stud to the next. Make the vertical height at least 10 or 12 inches so that the board will not buckle. Nail to each stud. The cracks can be filled with spackling compound.

Trees in Winter Offer Some Hints

Trees in winter have helpful hints for the homeowner to observe and interpret. The length of twig growth, the color of bark, the size and health of buds all have meaning. By reading these signs, tree owners can avoid serious trouble at a later date, reports Robert A. Bartlett, president of the F. A. Bartlett Tree Expert Co.

A twig in dormant condition can divulge a whole series of events that may have taken place over a period of years. A tree's health is generally normal if the distance between bud scars from year to year is uniform. A tree indicates unhealthy life if the distance between bud scars becomes progressively shorter denoting that the twig is making less and less growth each year.

The size and fullness of a winter bud reveal the current state of the tree's health. A shriveled bud is a tip-off that something has happened to the twig or branch, or even the corresponding root below ground. Examine buds of two trees of the same variety. One one the buds may be fat, shiny, waxy and firm. On the other, weaker tree, the buds will be smaller in size, dull and less numerous.

Examine the bark of a twig. Pimple-like eruptions or a peculiar spotting, may be due to a fungus that has penetrated the living tissues. If the signs indicate the tree is unhealthy, search for the cause. Something may have happened to cause the tree to become weakened all at once, or the decline in vigor may be progressive. Previous storm injury, damage to roots, malnutrition, invasion of borers and bark beetles, internal diseases, or the effects of leaf-eating insects and leaf-destroying fungi may be among the causes. Call a tree expert to help diagnose the trouble, then begin corrective treatments promptly — such as feeding, the spraying or pruning when the time is ripe.

Boards Extra Wide

Solid wood boards up to 30 inches wide are on the market. Several lumber firms make them by edge-gluing numerous narrow pieces together. They make sturdy cabinet doors. A clear finish will keep the interesting strip pattern visible.

Garage Storage

Storage space can be found in even the smallest garage. Build cupboards of western pine and suspend them from the ceiling joists against the back wall, above the car's hood. Doors will keep stored items from falling on the car.

Coleus Offers a Splash of Color in Shade

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

NAPLES, N.Y.

Coleus: Shady Ladies: If you're looking for a flashy plant which will grow in the shade and give you a splash of color, try coleus. The last several years have seen a remarkable increase in the use of this old-fashioned plant. Years ago it was grown in the north window for its show and now it's used as a bedding plant for shady locations and for porch boxes. Coleus comes in all colors of the rainbow—rich reds, yellow, coppers, pink, green and soft ivory, chartreuse and dozens of other bright warm colors.

You can start coleus from seed and from "slips" rooted in plain tap water. Getting the seed to germinate is easy if you remember one point: the plant is of tropical origin (java) and it needs a warm temperature, about 75 degrees or higher. Grow or start seed in a loose mixture of sand, peat and perlite, one-third each. See sown in March will be about right for outdoor cuttings. Order

getting the colors you want.

Many home gardeners have potted coleus in their windows now. Take cuttings from the tips. After white roots develop, pot these into three inch clay pots and grow in a bright window (no direct sun). It's natural for coleus leaves to drop indoors, especially if the air is hot and dry. Coleus is one plant that likes to be pinched to induce branching and business. Pinching consists merely of snipping off the shoots (tips), using your thumb and forefinger.

Water Witching Works: Some time ago we mentioned water witching (the art of locating water in the ground). Here's nice letter from a reader: "My grandfather knew how to locate water and he did it for years (he lived to be 88.) People were always amazed to see him take a forked twig into both hands and walk to where he thought water might be. If water was near, ever, with the strength of both hands, he could not keep ground. On occasion, when water lines could not be located in the village, he would help out with his water witching twig. Also, using this method, he located water for persons wanting to build homes.

"I recall when a neighbor lost his car keys, he called on grandpa for help. He put a coin of the same material as the key into the twig, and to everyone's surprise, the twig quickly pulled down toward the key lying on the ground where it was lost."

Green Thumb note: We get many letters saying that Water Witching works. Hope more readers will write and tell us if they think it does or does not work.

GREEN THUMB BONUS: Are cats and dogs bothering your bushes? Send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for my bulletin, 14 Tricks to Keep Cats and Dogs Away from Plants — George Abraham. The Green Thumb, Naples, N.Y., 14512.

Paneling Adds Punch

A magic word in news and advertising is "new." New things, products and ideas get the most attention.

How long has it been since you have dressed up your living room, dining room or recreation room, with a new wall paneling? Aren't you getting tired of that old paint or wallpaper job?

New panels in prefinished hardwood will thrill the family—when they're installed right over the old walls to lift the room, and the family, out of the decor doldrums.

new designs for the home owner to choose from. Take Sunrise Hickory, a Masonite brand panel produced by a new process which furnishes a deep color effect. Each panel has color tone variations from plank to plank.

Useful in a variety of locations, the paneling is medium brown with reddish tones. Another newcomer is Valencia, which resembles cork and comes in textured panels consisting of 16 vertical areas that break off at staggered levels and feature different textures from course to course.

GETS AROUND — Oak flooring gets around. It makes a spectacular ceiling for this American Wood Council house. Interior designer was Jim Young. And it's pointed out that caring for hardwood floors is relatively simple. The Oak Flooring Institute recommends use of a good quality wax that combines cleaning and waxing.

Your Horoscope - - Today and Monday

Sunday, February 27

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A wonderful day to decide what you really want out of life, and then to use those creative talents and aptitudes you possess to work out a plan whereby you can gain objectives and get the most from them. Complimenting others puts you way ahead since everyone is eager now for appreciation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A perfect day for extending yourself with others and thereby paying the way for greater success in the future. Your attractiveness will draw others to you. Try to make mate happier, too.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you talk matters over with kin, you can do much to improve conditions at home and have more harmony there. Invite friends in later in the day and have a delightful time. You have to work at happiness to really have it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21)

Get the aid you need from experts so you secure that data so vital to you now. Talk plans over with associates, also. Shopping, taking care of transportation affairs, visits, etc., all fine now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to enlarge thinking for greater prosperity, and for making concrete plans for such. Contact one who is most successful and get good advice from him or her. Forget all that extravagance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to be charming with others. State your aims, ambitions so you gain their cooperation. A more active participation in group activities is wise, too. Dress in good style.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) This is the right day to clear up any questionable points with an associate and have excellent understanding between you for the future. You can have far better relations with the public in general, also. Think constructively.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you show gratitude to an associate who has been of help to you in the past, you can do much to make that person happy now. Improve your surroundings in some way. If there is clutter, clear it up. Retire early.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have to be taught to smile more and more while young and so make life easier for himself or herself. The nature is apt to be very serious and worthwhile, but a stern manner could leave others cold otherwise, then the fine promise here would be lost. Public work is best since it could be a great help to the masses and give this youngster much inner happiness as well. Religion important.

Monday, February 28

After you have made good plans for someone on whom to vent in the morning, carry through with vim instead of going on a worthless tangent. A good friend may act erratically. Take it in your stride.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can handle personal affairs easily now, provided you don't neglect other important matters. A good friend who is in trouble needs your assistance. Give it willingly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You could have picked the wrong person to go out with for recreation today. If so, make the best of a bad situation. Concentrate on your work and do something constructive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to get into a new activity, which is all right, provided you first study every phase of it most carefully. If you think objectively a problem will soon be behind you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Further study is necessary before you keep an appointment that would take you into a new form of expression which could be wrong for you. Mate is in an irritable mood, so be solicitous.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Associates are feeling irritable so keep busy at own affairs, and soon all will be well again. You will have to be more objective if you want to clear up an unpleasant situation.

nature, but will at times mess things up just to prove ability at making them all right again. Be sure to direct the education along such lines as research, medicine, design, detective work and the like. Give as much education as desired plus some cultural attainment as well. A fine artist is in this chart.

Money Clips

By MORT REED

With an eye on the international monetary situation, the nation's leading coin experts and dealers are forecasting a year of mixed blessings for numismatics in 1972. All of them good. According to a majority opinion, public awareness of coin collecting was stimulated by the introduction of the circulating Eisenhower dollar.

The January 1972 "Crystal Ball" edition of Numismatic Scrapbook magazine is the 20th annual issue devoted to predictions from outstanding professional numismatists and other hobby leaders on just what the New Year will bring.

A majority of the experts have expressed a feeling that President Nixon's economic programs have slowed inflation, permitting many collectors to return to Leisure-Living activities they were forced to abandon during much of 1971. This trend will continue upward through 1972.

Of chief concern to most if not all professional non-professional collectors and dealers is the industry's battle against counterfeit and replica coins. Congress is not apportioning the situation with sufficient vigor, and citizens in, as well as out of, the coin collecting hobby are calling upon their representatives to speed up adoption of the "Hobby Protection Act," (H. R. 10600) introduced by Rep. Seymour Halpern, D-N.Y.

Oversight Beats Game

By Oswald and James Jacoby

When experts fall flat on their faces they usually do a super job if it. South was an expert who loved to play the dummy who insisted on playing four spades in spite of his partner's bids of two and three no-trump.

He was very unhappy when East won the first trick with the queen of diamonds and shifted to the king of clubs. He was even more unhappy when p.m. in regard to romance. A West dropped the nine spot since it looked as if he was echoing with a doubleton. East continued with the ace and jack and West showed up with a third.

Now South was ready to try to make his contract. The ordinary player would surely make it. He would lead a spade to dummy's king and return the nine with every intention of finessing. This would bring the contract home since East held the queen.

Expert South went down. He knew that East had shown up with 14 high card points in the minor suits. He also held exactly seven cards in the minors. They would be divided 4-2 or 3-3 since if East held five cards in either he would have opened in it. He also assumed that East would have opened one no-trump with a balanced 16 high card points, so South played his ace of trumps and continued by leading the jack and finessing.

JEANETTE CLIMBING BACK

Heart Association Our Cause — Paltz Parents Claim

KINGSTON Association, she was given a complete diagnostic workup at the Heart Diagnostic Unit located at Kingston Hospital under the direction of Dr. Edmund Reppert, president-elect of the Board of Mid-Hudson Heart Association. She was immediately sent to Babies Hospital in New York City for open-heart surgery. She underwent surgery August 14, 1971 and for eight days following the operation Jeanette was in the coronary intensive care unit, only given a 40-60 chance of survival. Through the advances made in heart surgery and the specialized training and dedication of the coronary care nurses, Jeanette's chances of and after a long period Jeanette was well enough to return home to New Paltz.

Jeanette's schooling is being carried on at home through tutors, but she is looking forward to returning to school before the end of the year. At this time, Jeanette will still be under limited restrictions.

In July, Jeanette will celebrate her 14th birthday and as she blows out her candles her wish and the wish of her family might well be that all children with heart defects could be as fortunate as this birthday girl.

A spokesman for the Mid-Hudson Heart Association adds that Jeanette's story is just one of many Heart stories from the residents of Ulster County which helps to stress the importance of continued heart research and the saving of additional lives.

"One way of helping your heart and the hearts of your loved ones is to support the Heart Fund Campaign which is being conducted throughout February, nationally designated as Heart Month. Give so more will live!" A Heart spokesman added.

Towering, Contemporary Sculpture by Former Kingstonian James J. Kelly Dominates a Pennsylvania Art Hall
(INSIDE: See "A Monolithic Mirror for Lehigh's Campus")

HAVING KIDNAPPED MARY, the Phantom tells her there is no hope of rescue and, to quote the original titles, "You shall stay here to brighten my toad's existence with your love." Scene's from the complete, uncut, original version of "Phantom of the Opera" to be shown at Woodstock School on the night of March 4.

Bright, Sparkling Viewing With 'Phantom' & Chaplin In Rare, Uncut Originals

ERA OF THE SILENT TWO-REELERS will be revived when a duo of Charlie Chaplin films helps to make up the show this weekend in a fund raising event for the Onteora Chapter of AFS. In this scene from one of the Chaplin classics to be shown, "The Immigrant," Charlie sights the Statue of Liberty from the deck of a ship in the company of other newcomers to the U.S.

WOODSTOCK

Here's a really fun event — one that'll present the complete, uncut, original "Phantom of the Opera," made in 1925 and starring Lon Chaney. And that's not all. Also, on the same program, will be two Charlie Chaplin two-reel classics, "The Immigrant" and "the Rink," both made in 1916.

All three films will come to life as bright and sparkling as when they first hit the screen, on Saturday, March 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Woodstock Elementary School. The program of old silent movies is being sponsored by the Onteora Chapter, American Field Service International Scholarships as a fund raising event. Proceeds will go toward sponsoring foreign students from abroad for study in the Onteora School District, and to help send OCS students abroad to travel and study for a summer or year.

Actress Virginia Daly Adams will introduce the films and, through background narration, add to their enjoyment and appreciation. In addition, the audience will have the rare opportunity of seeing them run off at their original and natural speed instead of the double speed so often seen when they are run through sound projectors.

From Rare Collection.

The films to be shown on the Saturday night program are very rare and part of a collection owned by Bown Adams. Adams has just finished the Third Silent Movie Festival sponsored by the Greater Middletown Arts Council, where Lillian Gish appeared in person, and his collection is one of the most complete of all silent film libraries in the U.S. today.

With special equipment, he'll show these great films for the first time since their early runs, adding accompanying music and sound on a separate sound system.

The original "Phantom" with Lon Chaney still offers more excitement than some of the tame imitations evoked by later remakes. It'll be a rare treat for the audience at Woodstock to see this film projected in its original motion — and so better appreciate the great pantomime of Chaney as he ascends the giant staircase of the Paris Opera or sits atop the roof of the Opera House.

Adams has scored an accompanying electronic tape with all the fine ballet and opera music suggested in the film; incorporates other electronic effects to heighten the many levels of horror portrayed by Chaney.

Tickets Now Available

Tickets for the March 4 event, to which the public is welcome, are available at various shops in the Woodstock area, from members of the Onteora Chapter of AFS International Scholarships, and from members of the Student AFS Club at Onteora High School. They are priced at $2 for adults and $1.25 for children.

For further information, contact Mrs. William Sloane, Mrs. Ted Brooks, Mrs. George Holzman or Mrs. Charles Weidman, all of Woodstock; Mrs. Frank Snyder of Olivebridge; or Mrs. Richard Tennant of Samsonville.

A Monolithic Mirror For Lehigh's Campus

BETHLEHEM

Poised near the center of DuBois Gallery in Lehigh University's Hall of Liberal Arts on the school's campus in Bethlehem, Pa., is a 22-foot, polished brass sculpture, created by award-winning artist, James J. Kelly.

Kelly now resides in Kutztown, Pa., and is assistant professor of art at Kutztown State College. But, prior to that, he lived here in Kingston; earned his bachelor of science degree in 1958 from State University of New York at New Paltz.

Married to the former Beverly Ann Neer of Rifton, he holds a master of arts degree from Michigan State University; has also studied and researched at the Royal Swedish Academy of Art and the Modern Museum, both in Stockholm.

A Smithsonian Show

His prize-winning works have been exhibited nationally and regionally on frequent occasions, and he was the subject of a travelling exhibit organized by the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C.

Kelly's towering, contemporary sculpture has just been acquired by Lehigh University as the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Martindale Jr., of Newport Beach, Calif., who specifically commissioned the work of art for the university's gallery.

The sculpture is an intriguing work, capable of mirroring images, and rippling harmonious colors in its monolithic surfaces. Weighing in at 2,200 pounds, the sculpture rises from a six-foot square base of black, flat-enameled, sandblasted steel, placed on the floor of the gallery to kaleidoscopically reflect images on all five floors of the uniquely constructed lobby gallery in the campus hall.

Its 11 monolithic fins point in eight directions, from the vertical center of the sculpture. Interspaced between these fins are irregularly crumpled sheets of brass, multi-colored by patina.

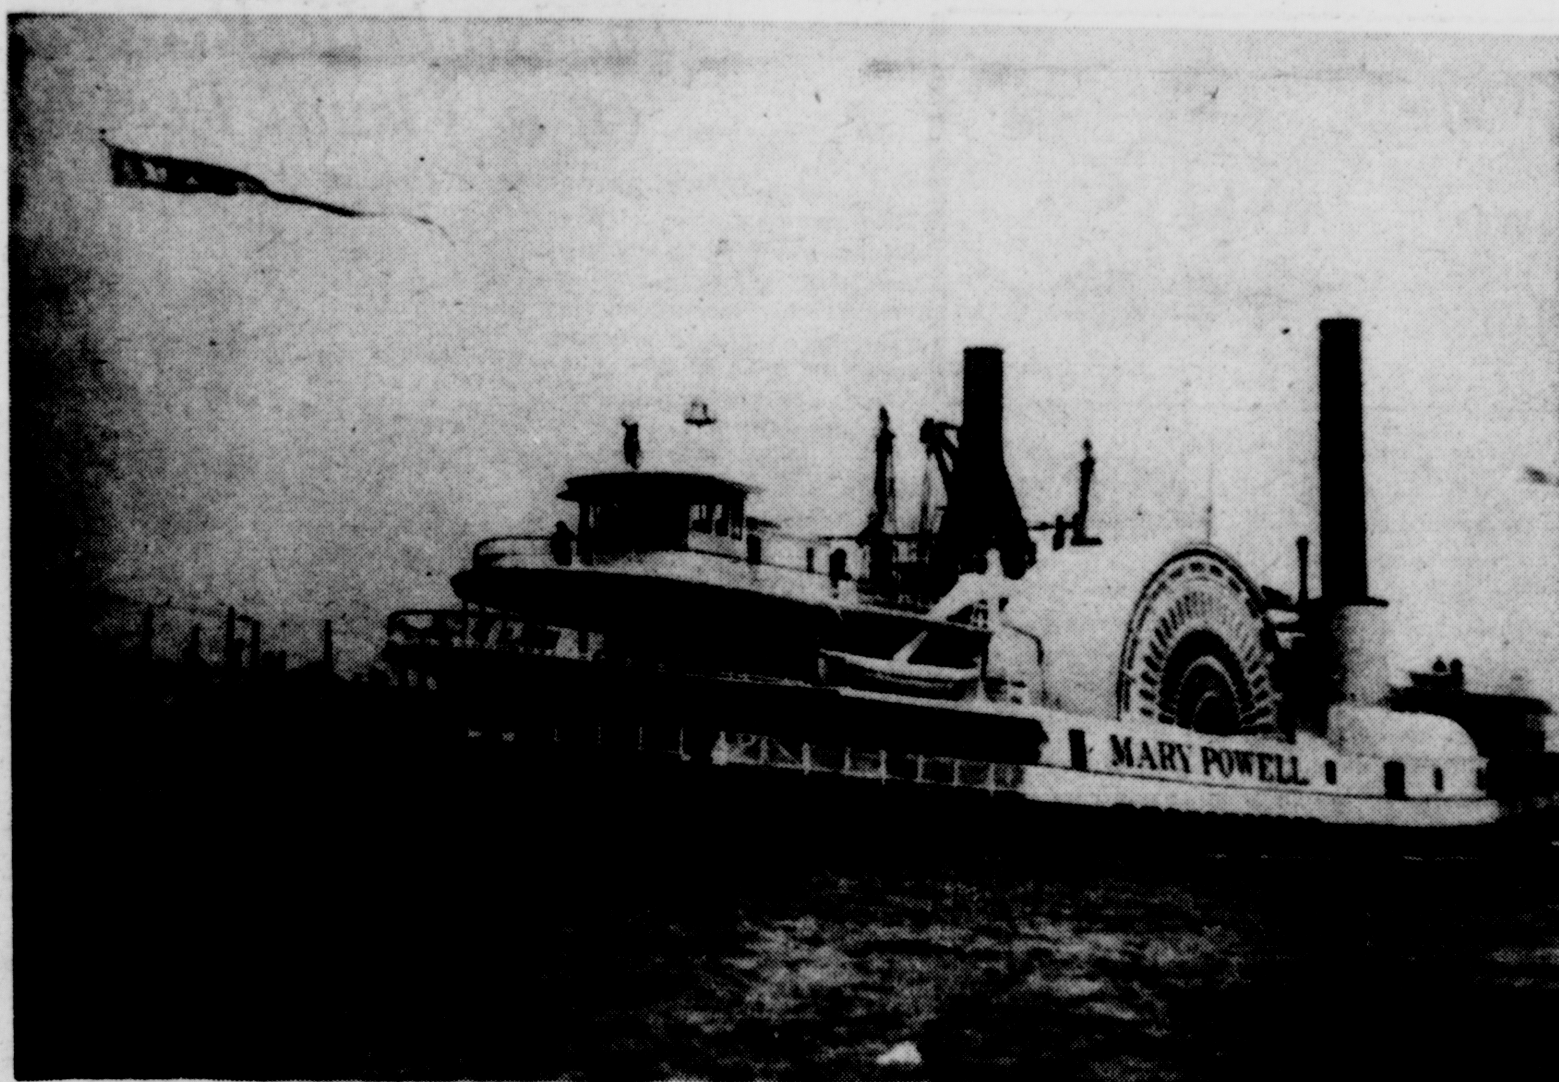

Gift of Alumnus

Martindale, who commissioned the sculpture, is a Lehigh alumnus and retired vice president and Pacific coast director of Fairchild Publications, Inc.

Former Kingstonian Kelly is also the author of "The Sculptural Idea," a book on the theory of sculpture, on a comparative basis, for the aspiring student of the art. He is also a participating member of the College Art Association. He and his Rifton-born wife are the parents of three children.

SCULPTOR JAMES J. KELLY

AT THE HIGH NOON of her career, the "Mary Powell" was the acknowledged "Queen of the Hudson River." Built in 1861 at Jersey City and towed away for dismantling in 1920, this picture was taken about 1890. During her span of nearly 60 years, the "Mary Powell" underwent a series of alterations, each of which made a distinctive change in her appearance. This photo shows her after the alterations of 1887-88 and prior to those of 1894. On top of the pilot house stands the hand-carved figure of the Goddess of Liberty, which adorned the vessel from 1864 until 1894.

A Farewell Visit to the Ruined 'Mary Powell'

By CAPT. WM. O. BENSON

During the winter of 1920, both the "Mary Powell" and the "Albany" lay at the Sunflower Dock on Rondout at Sleightburgh. The "Mary Powell" had been there since her last trip under her own power on Sept. 5, 1917.

On Saturday, shortly before the ice went out of the creek, my brother Algot and I took my father's lunch over to him on the "Albany" where he was working as ship's carpenter. Rumor was that just as soon as the ice broke up, the "Powell" would be towed to South Rondout to be broken up.

Knowing this, my brother said, "Come on Bill, let's take a walk over on the 'Powell.' It will probably be the last we will ever be on her."

Cold and Dark

We went aboard the gangway right aft of the engine room. All her fine machinery was black from the grease that had been put on the engine when she layed up so it would not rust. All steamboat engineers always coated the bright work with grease in this manner when their boat was layed up at the end of the season. Everything was cold and dark and still.

Then we went back to the dining room at the rear of the main deck. Most of the tables and chairs had already been removed. Everything was very dusty.

Up on the saloon deck, most of the carpeting had been taken up, with a few pieces remaining here and there. A few of the big easy chairs in the saloon were still there but most were gone. Some of the plate glass windows were cracked, and others broken — with canvas tacked over the openings.

When we went up on the hurricane deck, my brother had to use a strew driver to pry open the door to the pilot house. It was jammed, probably due to the fact the "Powell's" stern rested on the bottom at low tide. The east end of the dock had been filling in and hadn't been dredged since the "Powell" stopped running.

An Old Time Table

In the pilot house, there was a long, low locker across the back. The top of the locker been removed, her smokestacks are beginning to be streaked with rust, and her white paint shows the dirt and grime accumulated during her final two-and-a-half-year lay up.

Hand Me Down Things

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA

AS MIDDLE AGE dilutes our juices and reduces muscle tone, fewer and fewer of the supposedly guaranteed stimulants seem to have any restorative effect on us.

Friends drop up from the city and tell us a new Broadway musical is an absolute must! We plod doggedly off to Manhattan to see it and, for all our efforts in arranging baby sitters and fighting traffic, are rewarded with the tortures of leg cramps, boredom, and an itch to leave at intermission. The dancers always look like the dancers of 20 years ago, the singers are inaudible, and the orchestra assaults our ears with its loudness.

Other friends recommend exciting novels by bright new talents. Almost invariably, they remain unfinished after a 30-page reading inroad, abandoned in disgust after the first sexy scene in which the youthful author allows his hero to approach a newly met girl with the suggestion that they "sleep together."

As for pub crawling and what must of necessity be consumed on such an adventure, we have discovered in middle age that it leads only to migraines.

It's not that we're snobbish or highly selective. When younger, we devoured shelves of books; zestfully enjoyed "The Hardy Boys" as much as Shakespeare. We waited months for tickets to "Guys and Dolls" or "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," laughed uproariously and tapped our feet throughout once admitted. And, never once, in those days, did an evening of sipping martinis or slugging scotch interfere with the next day's work.

We suspect, somehow, that the excessive claims made in advance today are more the root of our problem than advancing age. It's never just a new book—it's always a work of true genius . . . and when it turns out to be trash, we're always disappointed.

She's never just a leading lady—she's always a superstar . . . and when her voice comes over the amplifying microphone, we always wince. It's never just a football game—it's always a sports extravaganza . . . and when it's duller than "I Love Lucy" reruns for the 30th time around, we can only feel a sense of anticlimax.

And still, we would not want you to think that we are so dried out that we cannot be captivated, involved and excited by anything. All anyone need do is tell us about a nearby ruin, some old stones, the pitted foundations of a vanished community, and we're off and running. Lead us to a faded fresco in marble, a crumbling flight of stairs in an abandoned hotel, a well where Civil War soldiers rested and watered, a cemetery with Colonial tombstones, the yellow dust pervading an old mansion—and we race off to worship at the shrine.

We'll go anywhere, anytime—in August's heat, winter's snow, spring's thunderstorms and fall's crisp mists to gawk at old stones. And never once have we felt let down by the old stones of archaeological antiquity as we have felt unstimulated by Mailer's latest novel, Mary Martin's most recent musical, a martini with an anchovy-pitted olive, or last winter's Super Bowl.

Old stones piled on old stones are marvels that exhilarate us as testaments to the wisdom of human hands. All of which is by way of explaining—somewhat—our particular, personal approach to the article on Albany's South Mall to be found elsewhere in TEMPO today.

HAVING BEEN RAISED in the belief that Will Rogers was one of America's gentlest and most beloved humorists, we were surprised recently to discover that, in addition to being a folksy, homespun charmer, he was also an audience shocker.

His wit was unpredictable as when he once spoke to a group of realtors and opened by saying, "It's a pleasure to speak to the greatest bunch of liars on the face of the earth." Or as when he addressed a meeting of bankers to tell them how many of their colleagues there were. They numbered 20,000, he said, and added, "Those and the 30,000 of you serving time in prison add to a population of 50,000."

Someone once bet Rogers he couldn't make Calvin Coolidge laugh. Rogers won the bet by saying, as they were introduced, "I didn't get the name."

Television and nightclub comedian Don Rickles does a take-off, paraphrasing one of Rogers' famous lines, "I never met a man I didn't like except Wiley Post." When we first heard Rickles deliver the sick joke, our reaction was that he dared too much; had a heck of a lot of nerve. Now, after learning what Will said to the realtors, bankers and ole Cal, we're sure it's exactly the kind of humor he loved himself.

In any event, it seems to us that Will's wry wit solved long ago a problem facing us today. The concept of the last angry man in entertainment is just too depressing, it seems. We're crippled by the fact that we're trying to please everyone and massage everyone with the same vibrator (as in Marcus Welby, Gunsmoke and Here's Lucy) that we ignore the fact many people like different vibrations.

In Symbolic Realism Of a Visual Poetry

WOODSTOCK

The representative exhibition opening at Woodstock Artists' Association on Saturday, March 4 marks only the second time in the more than half a century history of WAA that a living artist has been represented with a one-man show.

This signal honor goes to Godwin, long-time Woodstock artist who grew up in Switzerland and England. The exhibit, titled "Godwin — Three Aspects," covers work done between 1964 and 1971. It opens with a public reception and party on March 4 from 4-6 p.m.; will run through Sunday, March 19.

Included will be paintings and drawings "in the symbolic realism of a visual poetry." Three aspects emerge in the phases through which the artist has worked in the past eight years, in a distinct pattern of spiritual and technical development.

Death Without Morbidity

The first phase had its traumatic beginning in the death of John F. Kennedy, from which it takes its theme. Godwin concentrates on still-life (nature morte) pictures of small wild creatures, flowers, love — all in subdued colors, but without morbidity.

From this "lifeless" phase in her work, she moved on to a grey and white series dealing with "the new race" — the new youth, new music and there is light and hope in this period. The third and latest aspect of her work comes from a year spent in Venezuela recently.

These paintings and drawings are marked by vibrant colors, surging through works of tropical richness, from the sun and rain and wildlife of the llanos where they were done. Godwin's one-man show at Woodstock's

Gallery-on-the-

Green should appeal to many different tastes in its use of water-color, pencil, oil and pastel and in its unique variety of subject and media. Hours for viewing following the opening part will be Friday thorough Monday from 1 to 4 p.m.

"SECOND JUNGLE FAUN" is the title of this work by Godwin. It is one of many examples of her oils, pastels and water-colors to be included in a representative exhibit of her work, opening March 4 at Woodstock Artists' Association.

Pottery, Spinning, More on New Paltz Summer Crafts Bill

NEW PALTZ

Nothing proves the success of any project as does a landslide of requests for a repeat of a program or event. And, in the case of the Summer Craft Program of the Huguenot Historical Society of New Paltz, the requests are many. People not only want the courses; they almost insist on reruns.

They'll get their wish again this year, but — since funds available do not permit free courses in 1972—a small fee will be requested of each craftsman or would-be craftsman interested in artisan training. The cost charged will cover only the use of equipment and time of the instructors.

This summer's crafts at Paltz will include weaving, quilting, rushing of chairs, caning of chairs, pottery, candle making, lacemaking, and spinning.

All About Looms.

Weaving (held Wednesday of each week) will cost each student $30 for a six weeks session, with three sessions planned from May 17 through Sept. 13. Looms will be available, but if those persons owning looms of their own bring them, the class size may be increased. Weaving will be given on a first come, first served basis.

Cost of all other courses will be $10 per person per session, plus the purchase of one's own materials such as flax, rush, tallow, etc. Sessions will be held generally on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays of each week for some six to eight weeks. Plans are also afoot for participants who wish to sell items produced to place them in the shop on a commission basis, to be offered to visitors taking the Huguenot Street tours.

If you'd like to enroll in a Huguenot Society craft at Paltz, write now requesting your acceptance to a course or courses. You'll receive notification of the time of the course later, and fee for the course should be sent at the time final enrollment is established.

All letters and checks should be made out to the Huguenot Historical Society, New Paltz, and should be addressed to Crafts Director, Huguenot Historical Society, P.O. Box 339, New Paltz, N. Y. 12561.

Will and Ben

Two famous Americans are going to be portrayed in video specials in the near future. CBS on March 9 has a one-hour item called "Will Rogers' U.S.A.," with James Whitmore as the actor-humorist, using written and spoken material of the late star. Whitmore is touring in theater presentations of same. On March 21, NBC will have a one-hour show, "Ben Franklin, American," starring Freddie Wayne, who has been impersonating Franklin for several years in theater appearances.

THROUGH ORNATELY COLUMNED ARCHWAY of another era, and dwarfing an ancient spire in the background, the massive machinery of today creates a modern skyscraper to take its place on the new South Mall in Albany.

PROMINENT IN THE NATION since colonial times, Albany is rich in political history and social heritage. From the State Capitol (R), one of the most significant public buildings in the U.S., four governors have been sent to the Presidency in Washington. But, now, the modern architectural project across the street that is the South Mall (all 98 1/2 acres of it) will try to upstage the capitol's "Million Dollar Staircase," through its modern buildings costing multiple millions per acre.

First, We Shape Our Buildings Then, Our Buildings Shape Us

It is enough to boggle even the most progress attuned mind.

Consider that it all began as a single, lone building, only 26 feet wide and 36 feet long, enclosed by a stockade 58 feet square, and the whole surrounded by a moat 18 feet wide. Because it was a wilderness outpost, and because there was antagonism between the Dutch and the Indians from the first hour of Henry Hudson's appearance in the waters of the river named for him, it also had its armament.

This consisted of two large guns and 11 swivels, and the garrison of 10 or 12 men.

This was Fort Orange in the first quarter of the 1600's. In time, the city of Albany grew up in all its urban sprawl where once the solitary stockade had stood.

A Building of Stone

And, in time, too, there arose there a building made of stone that looked for all the world like a French chateau and, eventually, housed a wealth of history.

They called it the New York State Capitol building, and it took more than 30 years to complete at a cost of over $25-million. In parts of the edifice, stonemasons let their imaginations loose. They not only carved likenesses of famous men, they immortalized the features of fellow workers and members of their families. In one spot, heads can be seen grinning and winking at each other.

But the ornate stone carving in the Capitol is only one of its fascinations. It is dominated by immense, fantastic stone staircases that rival the most famous in the world, and its legislative chambers are almost unparalleled in their beauty. Along its corridors hang portraits of many of the men who served as our Governors. Twenty-four of these men have occupied the Executive Chamber in this incredible building. Their work, and the work of the legislatures throughout the years have been translated into legislation that has affected this State and, at times, led the way for national legislation.

And, so, while the men who were our Governors are fascinating, the Capitol building has proved equally so.

Architectural Competition
But, today, the historic old building faces architectural competition in form, balance and pattern far removed from its own chateau-like facade. For the present Governor — a man who has always emphasized highway construction and the building trades — has ordained that Albany will have a new State Mall. Occupying almost 100 acres, it is an ultra modern complex of cantilevered and high-rise skyscrapers that is costing $1-billion. Its 10 marble-faced buildings include a 44-story tower — the highest upstate — and four 20-story buildings. There's a convention hall that looks like half-an-egg on its side, a massive platform uniting the entire project, terraced walkways, reflecting pools, fountains and, underneath, five floors of parking space.

While a mere 300 years in time and less than 100 acres in space separate the Fort Orange stockade from the new South Mall offices, they are millions of miles apart in style and cost. For some, the Mall is spectacular and glistening — a thing of surpassing beauty... a capital this state deserved whether it could afford it or not.

For others, there remains the age-old question of what makes America the Beautiful — preserving the past or an ever-changing townscape?

Sir Winston Churchill once said, "First, we shape our buildings, and, then, our buildings shape us." History has shown that the lowly logs of the Fort Orange stockade and the ornate stone of the Capitol molded many lives.

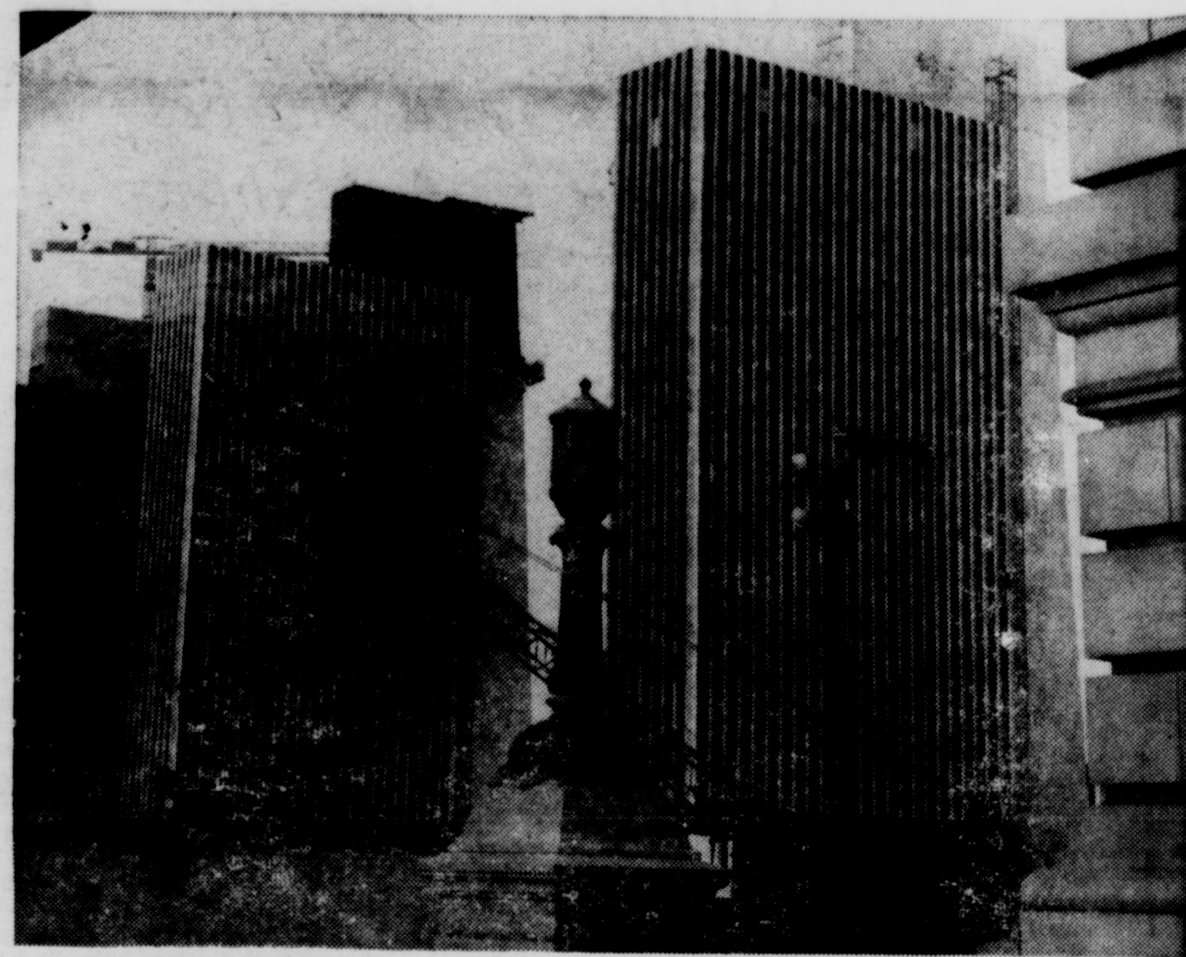

A Place in History?
It remains to be seen in the unseen future if Governor Nelson Rockefeller's Mall will make its own historic claims.

Rockefeller Center in New York was once a rare and handsome exception to the architectural rules. Now, 33 years later, its buildings have become disfigured as they have expanded beyond their original limits.

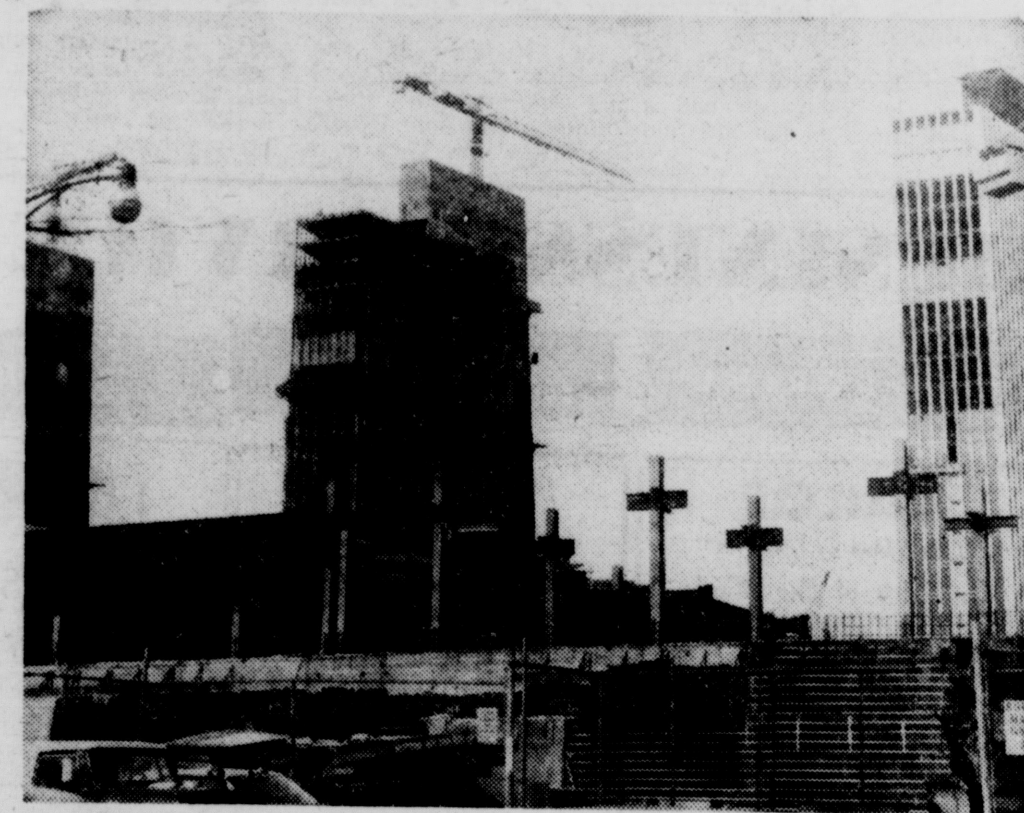

Will the Mall a half century hence still conform to those words, "Thine alabaster cities gleam undimmed by human tears," from "America the Beautiful?" Or will it answer to the description of that son of Italy, Leon Battista Alberti: "How are we moved by a huge, shapeless, ill-contrived pile of stones?"

Only time will tell if Rockefeller's dream project (reportedly a result of his embarrassment at having to escort Netherlands' Princess Beatrix through Albany's slums and honky tonks) can be praised as ordered and beautiful.

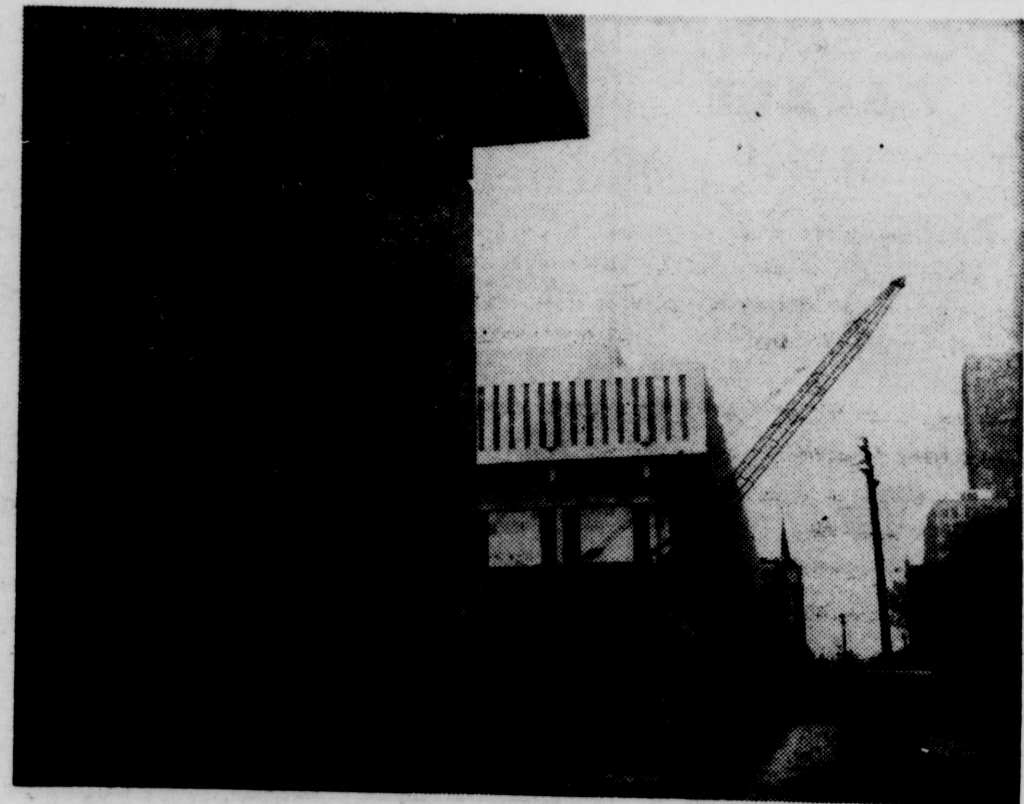

It is to be hoped that no one will ever have to say about the Mall as did designer Stanford White's killer, Harry Thaw — "My God, I shot the wrong architect!" But it is unavoidable, perhaps, that it will be said of Rockefeller in the years to come (as it now says in the inscription on Sir Christopher Wren's tomb in St. Paul's Cathedral), "If thou seek his monument, look about thee." (By TOBIE GEERT-SEMA)

AGAIN, THE STARK CONTRAST between the decorative arts of the past and the modern plunge toward palatial heights. The streamlined buildings of what has sometimes been called Governor Nelson Rockefeller's "edifice complex" in the state capital's new Mall tower over an old lamppost from the city's more gaudy past.

UNFINISHED AND YEARS IN THE BUILDING, the new State Mall is only partially occupied today. Some members of the Legislature have moved into new offices, but it will be months before the skeleton of this slender building has been fleshed out and the cross-like metal structures in the foreground have been hidden beneath still another edifice. This spring, they will stand in strange contrast to the thousands of tulips abloom in Albany's Capitol Park.

STILL WEARING ITS ALL-WEATHER plastic coat around base, this unfinished South Mall building has not yet been put to public use. Even so, the "instant" shrubbery is already in place. Such modern day landscaping defies the temperature, but the old weathervane atop the spire just down the street still predicts with the stoicism of antiquity. Millman's 'Insects,' Wilson's Bold Shapes For UCCC Art Show

STONE RIDGE The works of two Woodstock artists, Reginald Wilson and the late Edward Millman, will be exhibited in the Visual Arts Gallery at the Stone Ridge campus of Ulster County Community College from March 6 through 29. The show is entitled "Portrait of an Artist in Ulster County."

A native of Chicago, the widely known Millman studied at the Art Institute in the early 1930's, and received much acclaim for the St. Louis Post Office frescoes which he did with Mitchell Siporin in the late 1930's.

He served as an officer in the U.S. Navy in World War II in New Guinea and returned with General Douglas MacArthur to the Philippines, covering the defeat of the Japanese at Manila. The drawings he brought back were among the finest done in any theater of war.

Influenced by Overlook
Millman settled in New York after the war and in 1945 moved to Woodstock where he spent the last 19 years of his life before he died in 1964. Overlook Mountain in Woodstock had a profound effect on his life and work.

In Woodstock, he discovered the melodrama of the insect world and its thistle and seed pod landscape, with which he dealt in his drawings and paintings.

Millman's drawings were printed in Life and Fortune magazines. His paintings are in the collections of the Museum of Modern Art, Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Whitney Museum, all in New York. Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, and at museums in Denver, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Kansas City.

The works of Edward Millman in the UCCC exhibition were made available to the college through the generous cooperation of Mrs. Norma Millman, widow of the late artist, who loaned the works from her personal collection.

Active With WAA
Reginald Wilson, a native of Butler, Ohio, moved to Woodstock in 1939. For many years he was a board member and exhibition chairman of the Woodstock Artists Association, and became a life member in 1965.

He studied at the Art Students' League in New York and worked in the Easel Painting Division Federal Art Project in New York in the late 1930's. He served in the Army Air Force during World War II; is married to the artist, Carolyn Haeblerlin.

His art works have been exhibited at Brooklyn Museum, Whitney Museum and Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia, Mary Washington College at the University of Virginia, Boston Museum, Richmond Museum in Virginia and at Bryant Galleries in Jackson, Miss., and New Orleans, La.

The galleries which exhibit his works are the Forargail Gallery, Walker Galleries, Perls Galleries, Canso Galleries, Washington Irving Place, Art Collectors Place and Long Island University in New York.

A Versatile Artist
Wilson is an artist of varied versatility. He devotes himself to painting shapes which are bold in color and vigorous yet sensitive in form and design.

The visual Art Gallery, located in Vanderlyn Hall at the Ulster campus, is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. There is no admission charge.

A selected number of the works from the collection of Edward Millman and Reginald Wilson will be available for purchase.

"IN A RED SQUARE" is the title of this oil and sand on canvas work, one of the recent paintings by Woodstock artist Agnes Hart. It is among the examples of her work now being exhibited in a solo show at Phoenix Gallery in New York City through March 4.

A Farewell Visit

could be raised so that things like flags, pennants and pilot house supplies could be put inside. I found an old Catskill Evening Line time table, with a picture of the steamer "Clermont" on the cover, which I took with me. There were no chairs, since these had already been removed.

The old side curtains on the pilot house windows were still in place. They would be pulled down on the side the sun would leaving Rondout on her flying trip to the metropolis to the south, or when the sun was going down behind the western hills on the up trip.

The canvas that had covered her pilot house windows in previous winters, to protect the plate glass windows from the strong icy winds and snows, had been removed. The interior of the "Powell"'s pilot house was all varnished and it had turned very dark from the passing years and added coats of varnish.

The big, hand steering wheel was only about half showing, most of the bottom half being concealed in a well in the deck. The top reached almost to the overhead of the pilot house. I noticed how the round turned spokes of the steering wheel were flattened out on both sides near the rim. I asked my brother what caused this.

He said it came from the wear on the spokes caused by the pilot climbing the wheel like a ladder in order to turn the boat in a hurry. The old "Powell" never had a steam steering gear like the more modern steamboats.

He Walked the Wheel

"The pilot of the 'Powell' would have to climb the wheel coming into the Rondout Creek from the river on a flood tide," Algot said. "When it is flood tide, there's a very strong eddy at the mouth of the creek. The tide sets up strong and when it hits the south dike, it forms a half moon about 75 feet out from the south dike and the starts to set down. To keep steerage way on the 'Powell' they had to keep her hooked up until she entered the creek, because a side wheeler running slow or just drifting would have no rudder power. So the pilot in order to get the rudder hard over to port or starboard in a hurry would have to walk right up the steering wheel."

Algot, who had been quartermaster on the "Mary Powell" in her last years, pointed out that when the pilot got the steering wheel hard over he would then put the becket on the wheel to hold it. When the becket was taken off, the wheel would spin right back to midships. He added with a smile, "At times like that, the fatter and heavier the pilot, the easier the job."

Algot went on to point out to me the same act of walking up the steering wheel would take place on going around West Point and Anthony's Nose and rounding up in New York harbor.

In those long ago days when going down through the harbor on an ebb tide, a pilot had to get around very quick and find a hole in the heavy steamboat, tugboat, ferryboat and steamship traffic. On a steamboat like the "Mary Powell" with a hand steering gear, when going up or down through New York harbor, the pilot house was always fully manned. The captain or first pilot would be at the steering wheel, the second pilot standing with his hands on the bell pulls to the engine room or ready to grab the whistle cord, and the quarter master as lookout on a the forepeak.

Leaving Their Marks

Later in life when I saw the hand steering wheels of the "Jacob H. Tremper" and the steamer "Newburgh" of the Central Hudson Line, the spokes were all worn down and loose the same way. It showed how former pilots and captains left their marks on their steamboats long after they were gone.

We left the old Queen of the Hudson after our farewell visit in the bright sunshine of the late winter afternoon. On April 20, she was towed by the tug "Rob" on her final trip to South Rondout where she was dismantled.

PATRICIA BROOKS

A Leading Soprano In Special Concert

WOODSTOCK, N.Y. — A very special concert, this one — featuring the inimitable talents of Patricia Brooks, now with the New York City Center Opera acclaimed as one of the leading sopranos in the world of music today.

Soprano Brooks will give a concert of lieder music (Brahms, Schubert, Poulenc and others) Tuesday, March 7 at 8 p.m. at Woodstock Guild of Craftsmen Gallery, 34 Tinker Street. She'll be accompanied on piano by Harriet Wingreen, and the committee in charge feels strongly that it will be a unique program — one Woodstock will be honored and privileged to host.

Patricia Brooks has established herself in the last several seasons as one of America's leading sopranos. She has been described by music critics as "the greatest Violetta ever" and "one of the best sopranos around." A major name in the concert field, she has been a leading singer with the New York City Opera since 1963, appearing in a variety of roles — all to great critical acclaim, and all hailed as a "tour de force."

Has Appeared Abroad

Indeed, she has appeared with almost every major opera company nationally, and has scored great successes in South America and Canada, as well as England, where writers called her voice "beautifully soft and round with allure and sensuousness," and praised her high notes for their "bell-like quality" and her stage presence for "a sex appeal all too rare in opera."

TV College Football

ABC has renewed its contract with the National Collegiate Athletic Association for telecasting football games in 1972 and 1973. There will be 19 games each year, one more than in 1971. And, after the sixth Saturday game, the network is permitted to choose the rest of the contests on a weekly basis, meaning that there should be an important contest each Saturday and not just a game between a couple of teams going nowhere in national rankings.

Totally convincing and a singer of distinction, Patricia Brooks has appeared at Lincoln Center in a program similar to the one she will be presenting in Woodstock. There, she received applause, bravos and an extended ovation for a glowing recital. She has also worked with such conductors as Pablo Casals, Rudolf Serkin, Andre Kostelanetz, Seiji Ozawa and Igor Stravinsky, and has sung with most major philharmonic and symphony orchestras in the U.S.

Her natural gifts of musicianship, appearance and stage presence have been backed with training as a pianist, dancer and actress. At 10, she won an award for a piano performance under the baton of Leon Barzin. Later, she studied dance with Martha Graham and drama with Uta Hagen; appeared at Manhattan's Circle in the Square theater in several plays before devoting full time to her vocal career.

Tickets for her Woodstock concert may be purchased at the door or, for other ticket information call 679-6232. Admission prices are $3 for adults and $1.50 for students.

POTPOURRI

By JOAN L. WOINSKI

As for Lake Katrine Rod and Gun Club's annual banquet at Capri "400," we'd give it a GP-rating... Great Party, that is.

After 36 years, members thought it was time to make a few recognitions. Like: Joe Duncan who's starting 24th year as treasurer... Bob Saehloff, 17th year as banquet emcee... Winky Meyer, third time 'round since '61 as Club president. Joe Duncan begged off bein' on dais this year to give his wife Irma a break by sittin' with HER for a change. But Joe's been at head table so long, his absence caused an awful void; why, there was almost a bugle solo.... Taps!

Speakin' of recognitions, the Club's most coveted award for Best Sportsman was earned by Paul McGuire, newly-elected secretary. Paul's seldom at a loss for words but just this once he was speechless. He was lighting a cigarette when his name was announced. It's dead certain he didn't smoke it; the cigarette just disappeared. Personally we think he swallowed it!

Last year's president John Lalima copped the Club's Achievement Award plaque. And Joe Aiello who's blessed with vivid imagination walked away with "Best Storyteller" trophy. Seems when it comes to a collection of tall tales, Joe's is second-to-none.

Probably one of most appreciated of all awards was that received by 15-year old Scott Goble who netted "World's Greatest Sportsman" cup for setting good example of fair play on hunting grounds. And Pop Charlie was burstin' at the seams with pride. Charlie, by the way, is makin' name for himself in his own right. Understand he was downin' a cocktail at Salvucci's when teenager asked for his autograph. Don't know who she thought Charlie Goble was; one thing's for sure, he doesn't resemble George.

Of course there were the usual slapstick awards: sock-it-away purse for treasurer Duncan — and from its size, it was made from sock belongin' to someone with big feet (Joe's no doubt)... Mini-gun to Billy Wrixon who, small in build, has hard time luggin' heavy shotgun. But the one we really dug was Kazooie to Cliff Crispell. Seems Cliff has a habit of humming. When he plays cards, he hums; when he hunts, he hums; at banquets, he hums. An anonymous note alerted powers-that-be and suggested a musical instrument to further his talents. Actually, we think it was just a nice way of tellin' Cliff he was drivin' his buddies "bananas." But who knows: Since we've never heard him hum, we don't know if he hums like a bird or hits high notes in a way that'd make a dentist's drill sound good!

Also on tap were Joe and Liz Gallagher, Warren and Ruth VanKleeck, Ed and Bernice Radel, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph DeGraff, the Augustines — Betty and Roland, Skip and Ronnie Kugelman who just returned from Boston and were still ravin' 'bout sea food. Capri diners must've overheard and caught sea food urge 'cause Joe

Matthau on Tube

Walter Matthau, whose television credits could be etched on the head of a pin, will be on the tube March 6 when Hollywood Television Theater presents its version of Clifford Odets' play, "Awake and Sing," over the Public Broadcasting Service stations. The stage and screen star has the role of Moe, the disenchanted gambler.

Costello was havin' deuce-of-a-time keepin' lobster tank filled.

(Speakin' of Joe, he's NOT in California; he's in Port Ewen. That recent TV appearance on Truth or Consequences Show was taped a year ago.)

This bein' leap year, here's something a bit bizarre. Come Tuesday, Feb. 29 Mrs. Joe Huber will be the same age as her daughter Pat who was 14 on Feb. 10. You figure it out! All we can say is "Wonder how Joe likes bein' married to child bride?"

MOVIES

PART OF THE FAMILY of "THE GANG THAT COULDN'T SHOOT STRAIGHT," includes (L-R) Jerry Orbach, Herve Villechaize, and Irving Selbst as "Big Jelly." They recreate the characters who populated the pages of Jimmy Breslin's best-seller of the same name, now adopted for the screen. Also in the cast is Jo Van Fleet as the pistol-packing grandmother. The movie is the current attraction at Kingston's Community Theatre.

The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight

Long-time newspaper columnist Jimmy Breslin wrote a very funny book under this title, but Hollywood has not done right by the Irish sage in the movie version. It has not done right by Italian-Americans, either—and few, if any, of them will find anything funny in this attempted satire of the Mafia.

Peopled with a cast of almost totally unknown actors, who will probably never get any further career-wise after their hammy performances in "Gang," this movie manages to offend nearly everyone. As it unreels currently at Kingston's Community Theatre, it abounds with screen witlessness. Breslin's book derived its comedy from the exploits of a sad-sack mob of Brooklyn hoods, and his special brand of satire kept the plot good-humored and scornful.

But the movie script simply makes silly stereotypes of the characters, and ethnic, racial stereotypes at that. If we are to believe this film, everyone in the rackets is either murderous, vicious, totally retarded or physically deformed, and believe further that if your ancestors were born in Sicily, Milan or Rome, there had to be a dumb racketeer on your family tree.

The acting is as bad as the script, and Jerry Orbach of Broadway—musical fame is absolutely atrocious. Jo Van Fleet, usually to be counted on for a fine performance, is awful as Big Momma. Breslin should sue and the rest of us would do better to forget the screen version of "Gang" ever happened.

$ (DOLLARS)

Due to open this coming Wednesday, March 1, at Kingston's Mayfair Theatre, is this amiable film about a bank robbery. The opening night premiere is being sponsored by the Ulster Businessman's Association and deserves your support ($3 a seat including champagne) since proceeds go to the very worthy cause of the Ulster County Community College Scholarship Fund.

Not only have the majority of critics called "$" pleasant fun, but they have lauded its attractive cast (Warren Beatty, Goldie Hawn, Gert Frobe), its clever dialogue, its suspense, and its razzle-dazzle chase sequence.

Goldie Hawn does a switch on the call girl with a heart of gold. She plays a gold-haired lady of the evening with a heart of money. In partnership with a smuggler and a crooked Army quartermaster, she gets involved in a bank robbery at an ultramodern, burglar-proof, European financial institution—and pulls it off by using an updated Trojan-horse tactic. And the criminals can justify the whole thing to themselves since the loot they caper off with is dirty money to begin with. It's been banked by crooks in the first place—and, so, they'd be the last ones to holler cop.

Other Choices

THE FRENCH CONNECTION. Ending up a long run of four weeks currently at Kingston's Mayfair is this superlative adventure thriller. It will play for the last time this coming Tuesday night and, if you haven't seen it, rush over posthaste. Gene Hackman is a sure-fire bet for an Academy Award nomination as he comes on strong in the role of the indestructible, real-life New York City cop, Popeye Doyle. It's exciting entertainment and it's all about a French TV star and his Gallic businessman cohort who get caught pulling off a multi-million dollar narcotics job.

FILM FESTIVAL. New Paltz Cinema is rounding out its week-long Film Festival with the last three reruns booked on its oldies but goodies bill. Tonight, Sunday, Feb. 27, "WOMEN IN LOVE" is featured—with Glenda Jackson, Alan Bates and Oliver Reed in the film based on D.H. Lawrence's novel about the relationships between the sexes in an earlier England. Monday, Feb. 28, the Paltz Cinema has "COLD TURKEY," the black comedy with Dick Van Dyke as a young minister who turns a whole town off smoking in order to win a big money prize. The festival ends the following night, Tuesday, Feb. 29, with "THE NIGHT THEY RAIDED MINSKY'S," a most marvelous movie about the old burlesque days with Jason Robards, Bert Lahr, and the sidewalks of East Side New York when they burgeoned with colorful life.

SNOW JOB. If skiing is your bag, you'll like this film, now showing at Red Hook's Lyceum Theatre. It features some of the best skiing available via Jean-Claude Killy, one of the world's great skiers. Unfortunately, he doesn't act as well as he skis, and the only other "name" in the film is Vittorio De Sica, who emerges as pure ham in his brief role. Still, the skiing itself is superb and the plot centers

WARREN BEATTY and GOLDIE HAWN count the loot from their bank job caper in "$" (DOLLARS), the suspense thriller in which they star, and which opens with a gala premiere March 1 at Kingston's Mayfair Theatre. around the robbery of a ski lodge in the Italian Alps. The caper is pulled off by Killy as a ski instructor, his French girlfriend, and an American who's a snowmobiler. Once the robbery is accomplished, the skiing and snowmobiling necessary to stash the loot in an almost unreachable spot take over the screen for exciting beauty. (By TOBIE GEERT-SEMA)

JEAN-CLAUDE KILLY (he of Olympic skiing fame) makes his movie debut in "SNOW JOB," the pleasant and entertaining-enough film now featured on the double bill at Red Hook's Lyceum Theatre, along with "The Good Guys and the Bad Guys."

It's been held over yet again at Poughkeepsie's Juliet Theatre. Miss Jackson also stars in "WOMEN IN LOVE," showing tonight only at New Paltz Cinema.

Lavish Book Slated On Works by Brock

Due for publication early this spring is BROCK, THE MAN AND THE WORK, a lavish book centered on long-time Woodstock artist Brock.

Cusick Associates, the publishers, will make copies available to a limited number of subscribers, both national and international. And, Cusick insists, "nothing has been spared" to make this book the "best possible presentation" of a broad range of Brock's paintings and drawings accompanied by a biographical sketch and discussion of the works.

Included in the tome will be 15 exquisite full-color Brock paintings and 60 exciting black and white examples of drawings, as well as paintings, all part of a volume destined to be envied for its quality. Daniel L. Cusick, art critic and personal friend of Brock—who knows his work intimately—has written an incisive portrait of the talented Woodstocker, whose achievements have gained him international fame and global exhibits. Cusick says he has aimed at presenting the warmth and genius of Brock in a personal and moving way.

Autographed Edition

"BROCK, THE MAN AND THE WORK" will be available at $20 a copy to subscribers only for its initial limited publication. Each volume of the first edition will be personally signed and dated by the artist. It will be a handsome addition to any home library as the story, in words and pictures, of a brilliant local artist, and as a book of extreme beauty.

In addition, a handsome portfolio comprising eight lavish color reproductions from the book is also available for $10 per set to purchasers of the book. For the nominal fee of $30, then, a book rare enough to cherish for years, and enough prints to frame and hang for a complete home gallery, or to give as gifts to others.

Those interested should reserve copies now and send check to: Cusick Associates, 208 Charles Street, Throop, Pa. 18512.

Bennett Slates A Trio of Films

A trio of unusually interesting films will be shown on the Bennett College campus at Millbrook this week, all open to the public without charge.

"China: Roots of Madness," a film written by Pulitzer Prize winner Theodore H. White, will be presented by the East-West Studies Program on Feb. 28 and 29 in Matthison-Kennedy Auditorium at 6:30 p.m. this Monday, and at 1 p.m. this Tuesday.

A First Prize winner at the Cannes Film Festival, "China" presents in vivid documentary terms the reasons behind that country's "century of blood and terror." It also depicts a nation that moved from the rule of Confucius to that of Mao Tse-Tung; includes rare footage by Burton Holmes and interviews with author Pearl Buck. White also appears in the film, which is narrated by TV actor Joseph Campanella.

Two other films, "The Robert Joffrey Ballet" and "Rooms" will be shown at Bennett on Wednesday, March 1. They are being presented by the Performing Arts Department and will be offered in Harkaway Theatre, Mellon Center for the Arts, beginning at 3 p.m. Discussion for the public and departmental seminar students will follow the screenings.

THE LITTLE LAMB CALLED "MUTTONHEAD" by R. Morrow

Once upon a time on a certain sheep ranch way up in the hills, there lived a little lamb called "Muttonhead". He was the whitest and fluffiest lamb that ever lived, but everyone thought he was also the dumbest. That's why they called him "Muttonhead".

He never did anything right. If the Shepherd, whose name was Tom, wanted the sheep to turn right, Muttonhead would turn left. If Tom wanted the sheep to graze in the fields, Muttonhead would run into the woods near the swamp and play hide-and-seek. When the sheep would bed down for the night, Muttonhead would stay awake until the others were fast asleep then at the top of his lungs he would go,

"Baa-aa, baa-aa, baa-aa."

And if that didn't wake all the other sheep, he would do it again, "Baa-aa, baa-aa, baa-aa."

Then he would curl up under his fluffy, white woolen coat and fall fast asleep.

One day Tom was talking to Mr. Tuttle, the owner of the ranch, and said,

"Mr. Tuttle, I just don't know what to do about Muttonhead, he can't seem to do anything right. I scold him all the time and he never pays any attention to me."

"All right, Tom", Mr. Tuttle said, "the next time I go into town, I'll take Muttonhead and sell him."

So it was settled, Muttonhead would be sold.

When Muttonhead heard from the other lambs that he would be sold, he became very, very sad. He decided to turn over a new leaf and for a day or two, he did everything he was supposed to do. This made Tom very happy and he thought that maybe Muttonhead wouldn't have to be sold after all.

But it was very hard for Muttonhead to be good for very long because he just loved getting into mischief.

One morning, a few days later, Muttonhead felt very playful and he thought to himself,

"Maybe I'll just get into a little mischief today, then tomorrow I'll start being good again."

Then he started running and jumping and chasing his friends. The more he ran and jumped and chased, the more the others laughed and ran around in circles. Soon, the lambs were scattered all over the fields.

When Tom saw what had happened, he got very mad and started shouting orders, trying to round up the scattered sheep. He finally managed to get them all together, except Muttonhead. Muttonhead had run off to his favorite hiding place in the woods, down near the swamp that was full of quicksand.

In his hiding place, Muttonhead stayed very still because he knew that Tom would come looking for him.

Pretty soon, he heard a rustling in the tall cattails at the edge of the swamp. He quietly peeked his fluffy head over the fallen log he was hiding behind. He couldn't believe what he saw! There was Mr. Tuttle's little three year old boy, Jimmy, chasing a butterfly and heading straight for the swamp.

Muttonhead didn't know what to do. If he came out of his hiding place, surely Tom would catch him and take him to town to be sold. But if he didn't do something, Jimmy might run right into the swamp. He peeked out again and saw that Jimmy was getting very, very close to the edge of the water.

Muttonhead didn't think it over any longer. He crouched down low and in one great leap, jumped completely over the log. Then he ran as fast and as hard as he could right at Jimmy. He was running so fast that when he crashed into Jimmy, he just bounced off and kept right on going through the air. When he finally landed, he found himself out in the middle of the swamp in very deep water.

At that moment, Tom was pushing his way through the cattails and saw the whole thing. He ran over and picked up Jimmy who was very frightened and crying very hard. Then he stepped very carefully into the swamp and rescued a very wet and soggy Muttonhead, who was also very frightened and baa-ing as loud as he could.

Just then, Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle came running down to the swamp looking for Jimmy.

"Muttonhead is the bravest, smartest lamb I've ever seen. He just saved Jimmy from falling into the swamp," cried Tom.

"As a reward, we'll build him a fine little barn all his own," said Mr. Tuttle, "and he can run and jump and play all day long."

"And we'll never, ever call him Muttonhead again," said Mrs. Tuttle.

So now, on a certain sheep ranch way up in the hills, you'll find the happiest little lamb in the whole world. From sunrise to sunset, he just runs and jumps and plays, and every once in a while, he even gets into a little mischief.

Our Story: KING GIAN CALLS TOGETHER THE GRAND COUNCIL AND ALL HIS MINISTERS TO LEARN WHAT PLANS THEY SUGGEST TO MEET THE REVOLUTION. HE FINDS OUT QUICKLY ENOUGH WHEN A COURIER ANNOUNCES THAT THE REBELS ARE FAST APPROACHING THE CITY.

PANIC ENSUES. THEY ALL SHOUT AT ONCE, BUT ON ONE THING THEY AGREE: EMISSARIES MUST BE SENT OUT TO BARGAIN WITH THE REBELS. A HUGE SUM IS PROMISED.

"WE CAN ALWAYS TAKE IT BACK WHEN WE REGAIN OUR STRENGTH," SAYS THE TREASURER SLYLY. WITH A LOOK OF CONTEMPT KING GIAN WALKS FROM THE CHAMBER.

HE RETURNS WEARING THE HORNED HELMET OF THORNHOLD THE GREAT, AND BEARS THE FAMED SWORD, CALABEAST. "I GO TO DEFEND DONDARIS, AS KING IT IS MY DUTY." "ALONE?" THEY CRY. "IF NEED BE," ANSWERS GIAN. HIS GUARD FOLLOWS.

"YOU LAUGHED AT MY GROTESQUE DEFORMITIES, BUT I, THE JESTER, FOLLOW MY KING AND BECOME A BIGGER MAN THAN ANY OF YOU."
